George L. Hale Jr. Cited Man of Year

George L. Hale, Jr., jeweler and community leader, was announced as the Chamber of Commerce man of the year Thursday at the Sikeston armory.

Master of ceremonies David Blanton presented the plaque.

Hale is active in the First Methodist church. He is past president and member of the Chamber of Commerce board and a past president of the Junior Chamber of Commerce. He is an active member of the Lions club and has served as a member of the Community Chest board and its chairman.

He is a member of the citizens advisory committee to the board of education and is a past chairman.

Hale was active in the formation and operation of the Sikeston Little League baseball, the Babe Ruth and Connie Mack leagues.

He has held every district office in Boy Scouting, and is a member of the executive committee of the Southeast Missouri Council. He has received the highest Scouting honor, the Silver Beaver Award.

Hale visits ill and aged acquaintances in the hospital two or three times a week, a member of the selection committee said.

Hale and his wife, Emily, have two sons, James, who is attending the University of Missouri in Columbia, and George Hale III, a junior at Southeast Missouri State College in Cape Girardeau.

Special Cotton Picker awards were presented to the speaker, Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor and Peter Myers, chosen by the Jaycees as one of four of the nations top young farmers.

Recognition was given to Mrs. Keith Collins, Sikeston's Woman of the year, and Mrs. Donald Grant, outstanding young teacher.

President William S. Huff, presented the retiring president of the Chamber of Commerce, Ray Clinton, with a plaque.

Clinton introduced new and old members of the board of directors. Retiring members are, W. S. McMullin, Phil Barkett and Bruce Lewis. Each received a certificate of appreciation. Present members are James Beaird, Lee Austin Bowman, Charles Stamp, Fielding Potashnick, Charles Blanton III, Jack Hogan, Sam Harbin, Sherman Grant, Mrs. Jolene Walker, Don Bohannon, Clinton and Huff.

The meeting opened with singing of the national anthem led by Richard Pinkerton, manager of the Chamber of Commerce. The invocation was given by the Rt. Rev. Msgr. Walter McGrane, pastor of St. Francis Xavier Catholic church.

The audience was entertained with numbers from the Little Theater play of South Pacific, to be given at the junior high school tonight and Saturday night. Cast members, who participated, under the direction of Mrs. Hope Terrell were, James Moore, Mrs. Pat Mitchell, Vivian Boyer, Douglas Morrison and Dan Norton.

Huff said of the Chamber program:

"We will place heavy emphasis on new industrial plants during the coming year, as long as we don't have to sell our souls to secure them. I can assure that not a single committee appointee is an honorary member, but everyone dedicated to do his job.

"We are on our way to expand our trade territory, and will continue to keep good relations with our area farmers, and our schools. We will also endeavor to expand our aviation facilities and emphasize the importance of aviation to the future of our community."

Organ music was presented by Miss Kathryn Clark.

Monsignor McGrane gave the benediction.

GEN. MAXWELL D. TAYLOR looks at his cotton picker award certificate, glasses in hand, at the Chamber of Commerce banquet last night in the armory. David Blanton, master of ceremonies, presented it to Taylor, who talked about the war in Vietnam.

Taylor Urges Patient Pursuit of Viet War

Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor speaking at the Chamber of Commerce Man of the Year banquet at the Armory Thursday night brought the Vietnam conflict into perspective.

The general organized his speech around three aspects of the U. S. involvement: The objective, strategy and progress of the conflict.

"I have no sympathy with congressmen who say, 'What are we trying to do?'" he said.

Taylor said the objective in Vietnam has not changed. It has been stated in different language by the Presidents Eisenhower, Kennedy and Johnson, but the meaning is the same.

The objective is to obtain the independence of the South Vietnamese people so they will be allowed to guide their country in their own way, General Taylor said.

It is my opinion that an unconditional surrender, such as was executed on the battleship Missouri following World

Hanoi Broadcast Rejects Neutral Zone Pullback

TOKYO (AP) - North Vietnam rejected today a new U.S. proposal to establish a 26-mile demilitarized zone between the two Vietnams, Hanoi's official Vietnam News Agency reported.

North Vietnam called the American proposal "a trick aimed at camouflaging the U.S. war escalation" and described it as a "violation of the 1954 Geneva agreements on Vietnam and the statute of the demilitarized zone."

The news agency also asserted the plan was aimed at "setting up a vast no man's land perpetually partitioning Vietnam."

The U.S. proposal called for withdrawal of American and South Vietnamese troops 10 miles south of the demilitarized zone if North Vietnam pulls its forces 10 miles north of the six-mile-wide zone.

The U.S. proposal was based upon a plan announced early this week by Canada's Foreign Minister Paul Martin. It was endorsed by the South Vietnamese government Tuesday.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk made the offer at a meeting of the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization's Council of Ministers in Washington Wednesday.

The State Department said that with the separation of forces "the United States would be ready to undertake talks leading to further de-escalation and an over-all settlement."

Under the plan, all U.S. and Vietnamese forces would withdraw 10 miles south of the demilitarized zone if North Vietnam would pull its forces 10 miles north of the zone.

This would establish a 26-mile-wide belt of land from the South China Sea to the Laotian border - a distance of about 45 miles - in which there would have been no military activity.

An International Control Commission was to have inspected the area to observe that both sides kept the bargain.

The demilitarized zone was established by the 1954 Geneva conference which divided Vietnam. The International Control Commission was set up to watch over the Vietnamese truce. The members are Canada, Poland and India.

New Policeman Joins Force

City Manager W. Raymert Miller announced the appointment of Larry G. Browning, 21, 115 North Frisco, as a patrolman with the police department.

The appointment is effective Saturday. He is a graduate of Sikeston High School and was employed as a dispatcher with Jolly Cab Co., 105 North Kingshighway. He is not married.

Browning is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Browning. The appointment brings the department to 16 men.

Browning will fill a slot vacated by Kenneth West.

Watching TV Can Be Hazardous

Pay Raise Ends Carson Holdout

NEW YORK (AP)- Johnny Carson will be back on the "Tonight" television show Monday.

Carson says he will return with "new enthusiasm" after his lawyers and the National Broadcasting Co. announced Thursday that the star and the network had settled their differences.

The comedian, whose weekly salary had been on the order of $15,000, will receive a "substantial increase." The amount was not revealed.

Carson left the show during the AFTRA strike against the networks, charging that NBC had breached his contract in showing taped reruns of his performances.

Carson said later that money was only "partly" the issue in the dispute. He was reported to have won concessions on personal appearances and the possibility of doing specials for the network.

Toll Road Program Concerns Hearnes

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Gov. Warren E. Hearnes expressed concern today over the future of one of his legislative proposals - one very close to his heart.

It is the embattled bill to create a toll road authority with power to build and operate toll roads providing quick transportation in areas not now served by adequate state or federal highways.

They would serve areas holding a potential of increased communications need and of boosted economic prospects such as the recreation areas and the mineral resources of the Missouri Ozark region.

Hearnes' great concern, he told his press conference, was that no amendment be added which would change the principle of the bill. He said the proposal had been gone over by experts in the toll road business and in investment banking. They liked it, he said.

Tuesday, the Missouri House adopted an amendment by Rep. James I. Spainhower, D-Marshall, that would have limited the authority's call on state highway funds to 3 per cent of the annual revenues on such things as gasoline taxes, auto-

Claud Smith Outlines Duties of Rotarians

The opening business session of the district Rotary convention was held at the Hunter Memorial First Presbyterian church on Wakefield and Allen Blvd. with a welcome by President Thatcher Scism, and greetings from District Governor Lee G. Cochran, Jackson.

The principal speaker was Claud D. Smith, Junction City, Colo., personal representative of Richard Evans, president Rotary International, Sale Lake City, Utah.

He lauded the number one Rotarian, as the oldest continuous speaker of the spoken word over CBS radio. He has developed a program entitled, "a better world through Rotary, with service above self.

He outlined 10 things for every Rotarian; "share Rotary by adding a new member, share fellowship by adding a new club; enjoy the fellowship; discover and serve the needs of your community; make your business and profession better; serve youth; pursue effective public relations; emphasize inter-nationality of Rotary; engage in world community service, and contribute to Rotary foundation."

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!
LEST WE FORGET -

In the depression years when money was scarce and a dollar was worth a dollar, the City of Sikeston, needed some money to help secure a National Guard Armory to house Co. K and to keep Co. K in Sikeston, as other towns in Southeast Missouri were seeking Co. K. Major Harry E. Dudley had been appointed by Adjutant General Means to represent Missouri at a meeting of several mid-west state representatives in the new State Capitol building in Lincoln, Nebraska. Major Dudley was flown in a National Guard plane to Lincoln for the meeting. After attending the meeting, Dudley returned to the National Guard Camp at Nevada, Missouri. After making his report to General Means, he was ordered to fly to Jefferson City to confer with Mr. Matt Murray who was State Director of the Works Progress Administration. Dudley accompanied by Capt. John Christy, (who was Speaker of the House and who is now Col. Christy and Mayor of Jefferson City), flew to Jefferson City, for this conference. Mr. Murray was very sympathetic with their request but said that Federal Regulations required the sponsors of a project to furnish the site and to put up money to purchase the materials necessary to construct an Armory. Mr. Murray advised Major Dudley that after making his report to General Means and upon his return to Sikeston, to discuss this subject of money and materials with Charles L. Blanton, Jr., then Assistant W.P.A. supervisor for SEMO. This was done immediately and Blanton suggested that Dudley contact the City Council for a site on which to construct the proposed Armory. This was done and the City Council donated a part of the City Park on Main Street to the State to be used as a site for the Armory. Now came the big problem, where was the sponsor going to get the necessary money? The State of Missouri agreed on a certain amount as its part. The City of Sikeston had no funds available. The Board of Public Works was contacted and after a meeting in the old City Hall, realized that Sikeston, might lose Co. K with a fairly good payroll unless something was done, Mr. J. F. Cox, Chairman of the Board agreed and then in 1938 the municipal Electric Fund gave $1375.00 to be able to get the program started and then in the next year gave $15,375.00. A total of $16,750 was invested in the Armory. Mr. Blanton put C. M. Taylor (one of the finest brick masons in the Country) in charge of construction and work started. Suddenly we discovered that the State-approved architects had planned for the ceiling to only be 16 feet from the floor - 16 ft. steel beams had been placed on order and were to be shipped by manufacturer very soon. Dudley who loved athletics suddenly woke up to the fact that Co. K's basketball team would be unable to perform satisfactorily with only a 16 foot ceiling so he and Capt. T. C. Dye (now Lt. Col. Dye) rushed to Jefferson City at their own expense to contact Adjutant General Means to see if steel beams at least 18 ft. high could not be purchased by the State instead of the 16 ft. ones. General Means called the steel manufacturer and it was agreed to do so.

As a result of the generosity of the State of Missouri, the City of Sikeston, and particularly the Board of Public Works, who furnished the Sikeston's share of money and the W.P.A., Co. K stayed in Sikeston, in its own Armory and the building has been used more or less as a community building since 1938. It also has been used for all high school basketball games for the last 20 years, saving the taxpayers thousands of dollars until a gymnasium can be constructed.

This is another dividend the citizens of Sikeston received from the Municipal Light Plant and one more reason to vote YES for the bonds to buy the Missouri Utilities Company property in Sikeston.

YOUTHFUL VIRTUES

Temperance - in the broad sense of the word - is a virtue more easily acquired in middle or old age than in youth. When the flesh grows weaker than the spirit, moderation and self-control come naturally. Young people, on the other hand, are not supposed to be temperate; they are expected to be full of "the fiery vehemence of youth," as Sir Walter Scott put it, and possess "the will to do, the soul to dare."

President Johnson takes a slightly different view. He has proclaimed a Youth Temperance Education Week beginning Sunday, April 23. Nowadays, the President said in his proclamation, "false sophistication" makes some people refrain from advocating "the simple virtues of character that are the mainstays of any great nation-duty, sacrifice, fidelity, sound minds in healthy bodies, sanctity of the home, purity of ideals and love of country."

Such simple virtues seem out of favor among the mass of high school and college-age youth who consider themselves "alienated." Resentful of authority, these young people have turned against the "establishment" and the "power structure" and elected to drop out of "the rat race," Kenneth Keniston of the Yale Medical School's department of psychiatry has written that alienation today "characteristically takes the new form of rebellion without a program, of refusal of what is, without a vision of what should be."

Opinions differ, but alienated youth may have a point. After attending a Human Be-In at San Francisco's Golden Gate Park, Kenneth Lamott wrote in the Los Angeles Times (March 26, 1967) that "Going barefoot and wearing your hair long and trying earnestly to be spontaneous and honest and not harming anybody else and taking no thought for the morrow and blowing soap bubbles and dancing to bands with names like the Grateful Dead and the Quicksilver Messenger Service is not necessarily a contemptible way of life. It may, perhaps, even be preferable to being a young executive on the way up with too much alcohol in your life, a mortgage you can't afford, a boss who demands unceasing admiration, and a third baby and first divorce on their respective ways."

NEW YORK (AP) -- Some sons feel it is a handicap to have a famous father.

Not actor Sydney Chaplin, son of Charles Chaplin.

"I think anyone who feels his life has been scarred because of the fame of his father is a bore," he said.

Sydney recently completed a role in "The Countess From Hong Kong," which was produced and directed by Charles Chaplin. It was his second appearance in a production by his father. In 1952 he played a young composer in "Limelight."

The younger Chaplin is proud of his father's historic stature in the film world.

"My father invented the big salaries in this business," he remarked. "He was the first man to ask and get a million dollars a year. He was always a good businessman."

Life with father in Hollywood wasn't too congenial for Sydney as a lad, however, because of his own harum scarum ways.

"Because he had to quit school after the first grade to support his mother, my father always had a great respect for education," he said.

"But I was pretty wild. I had been thrown out of three schools by the time I was 16.

"Dad was terribly disappointed in me at that time. He tried to be strict. He told me, 'You have to be something in life. You must do something to earn a living.

"But how can you tell a kid that he needs to go to work when he lives in a house with 12 servants?

"You know how some kids earn money by setting up a lemonade stand in their front yard? Well, I tried that gimmick, too, but instead of lemonade I sold scotch. Why not? It was there, and easier to do. And at 15 I was getting only $1 a week as an allowance."

A tour of duty during the war, Sydney said, brought an end to his playboy ways and a realization that it was time for him to seek a career of his own.

He helped organize a theater in Hollywood and discovered that father wasn't the only actor in the family. Since then Sydney has appeared in half a dozen films and a notable series of Broadway musicals, including "The Bells Are Ringing," with Judy Holliday and "Funny Girl" with Barbra Streisand.

Sydney maintains homes here and in Paris, where until recently he also owned a restaurant called the Chez Moustache.

CITIZENS CONTRIBUTE CONSCIENCE CASH

Reports from the U. S. Treasury indicate that Americans have a wholesaome sense of guilt. Practically every day, the Catholic Digest observes, someone mails money to its Conscience Fund.

It started in 1811, when a baffled Treasury official received $5 from a unknown donor suffering "the most painful pangs of conscience." word - of - mouth advertising started an epidemic of conscience trouble, and the next few months brought the Treasury fund $250. The total take now is approaching the $4 - million-a-year-mark!

The average price of a clear conscience seems to be $5 or $10. The most frequent offenses are the second use of postage stamps, pilfering government supplies, and the evasion of income taxes. Most of the offenses are against the government, but Uncle Sam obligingly accepts restitution for private misdeeds, too. Usually this happens when the rightful owner of the money cannot be found.

Uncle Sam has a conscience, too. Many citizens are annoyed by the government's picayune demands for listing large sums down to the last penny. They pay in full dollars only, and the government, having a conscience, must do something with the extra cents. The you-keep-the change contributions go into the Conscience Fund.

Many salesmen are taught to avoid the phrase 'the price is only so much.'

Offhand you might think the remark would flatter the customer. It implies that he is used to dealing in big sums and that the matter of a few pennies is of concern only to his house-keeper or gardener, not to himself.

But the wary customer grows nervous.

For a quarter you can buy a weekly magazine of over 200 pages.

For only a nickel customers will abandon one grocery store and buy their bread from another store.

For only a small saving, people will buy out-of-season and carry food from summertime till cold weather. Other people will trudge all over town to save only a dime here and a dollar there.

The way to appeal to a customer's pocketbook is to take sides with him, rather than against him. Appreciate that he has many outlets for his money and that he is anxious to make his money reach all the way around. Help him see the advantages to him of buying your product. Talk profits.

But don't let yourself think of any sum of money as unimportant.

NEW PROPOSAL TO CHECK THE SUPREME COURT

The constant abuse of power by the United States Supreme Court is becoming almost intolerable to thinking Americans. The Court is relentlessly striking down, one after another, all of the safeguards a free people have established, under law, to preserve their freedom and protect the rights of the innocent. Known, confessed and convicted criminals have been let loose by the Court to rob and kill again. School authorities have been denied the authority to discharge known communists from teaching positions.

Our Constitution is a structure of checks and balances. But one necessary check was omitted from it, because the founders never imagined that judges of the highest court in the land would usurp the power to make law. As a result, there in now no Constitutional restraint on the authority and decisions of Supreme Court Judges. As conditions now stand, a bare one-man majority of the Supreme Court can overturn any law and issue decrees binding on any Legislative or Executive body, with no recourse remaining even where the will of the people has been clearly expressed.

A Constitutional Amendment has been introduced in the House of Representatives which would permit a two-thirds majority of both houses of Congress, to over-ride any decision by the Supreme Court, just as a two-thirds majority of both Houses can now over-ride a Presidential veto. This proposal deserves very careful examination. Whether or not it is the best way to curb and check the Supreme Court, it is clear that some way must soon be found. A free people cannot be ruled by five judges appointed for life. HLH

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Reuther Disturbed By LBJ's Coolness -- Seeks White House Backing For Big Wage Hike Offensive

Detroit: -- For Walter Reuther it is all high noon, now. It's showdown time. And he's playing it as a loner. He confides virtually in no one over at big Solidarity House. He takes virtually no telephone calls from other national labor chiefs. He whirls in and out of their home cities without contacting old friends with whom he once marched shoulder to shoulder.

The mere change of Article Two, Sec. Six of the auto union constitution makes it possible for his massive organization to bolt the AFL-CIO.

But being a loner leaves him unprotected in his triennial offensive against the Big Three auto companies.

He may be so alone this time -- despite the cheering thousands of delegates to his special convention -- that Lyndon Johnson, once his old and good friend, may decide not to ride shotgun for him this fall as he did in '64.

This disturbs the red-haired auto union leader. For it is axiomatic in such tense and tough collective bargaining as must ensue this troubled economic year, that without White House support labor has strong leverage in a mass industry.

And this is a troubled year. Auto industry earnings are down. Layoffs are up. So is the pressure from 200,000 skilled auto workers -- out of 600,000 in the vast network of plants. As on the airlines and railroads and in rubber and even in radio and television, the skilled men and women want premium pay -- well above the big cash increase Reuther must win for his people to keep his union from being ripped by civil war.

There are those insiders who say that the guaranteed annual income -- pay by the year -- for hourly rated employes secretly has been won by Reuther from one of the companies.

The problem is cash. So the problem is getting President Johnson's support. This is just not developing in the White House. True, Mr. Johnson had Reuther over to the LBJ ranch not too long ago.

But there also was the day the redhead went to the White House. That was Feb. 20.

Reuther had a UAW plaque with him for presentation to Mr. Johnson. After testifying on the Hill, the Detroiter drove down to the White House. He had been told to go to a side gate. There was no press. Just trouble-shooter Joe Califano. They went to see the President.

There was a long, informal chat wrapped around the brief plaque - presentation formalities. But if there were pictures made, few have seen them. Reuther left as quietly and unnoticed as he came.

No doubt they discussed the coming battle in the automobile industry which may break into one of the longest strikes since 1946. No doubt, too, they discussed Reuther's searing attacks on the rest of the labor movement. They were eyeball to eyeball, but did not see alike.

To Reuther, George Meany may be a "plumber with a banker's mentality." To Lyndon Johnson, Meany is a shrewd and powerful leader of some 14 million unionists. And Meany is his close friend. The President knows that many times what has appeared to be a lack of Meany militancy was just Meany's behind - the - scenes efforts to avert costly crippling strikes.

So there were no stirring joint statements that day nor pictures either with the man who has vowed to drive Meany from the labor movement's leadership.

There also is the problem of Bob Kennedy. There are those in the White House and State Dept. who make certain to tell the President of the strong support many UAW leaders give Bob Kennedy's stop-the-bombing speeches. Virtually all the top UAW powers have been praising Kennedy in speeches before big crowds. This hurts the President where it hurts most - in the labor movement which has steadfastly been his most solid phalanx on foreign affairs policy.

So Reuther goes it alone. He sears the other labor chiefs -- and then calls on them to form a "comprehensive cooperative coordinated organizing crusade." In some instances -- such as the teachers whom he has given $1,-075,000 -- he backs his outcries with cash. Elsewhere he calls for a $30 million drive to unionize the working poor on farms and in slums.

Again he demands a new drive among white collar people and technicians so the labor movement can boast of a total of 35 million members.

But he's a loner. The labor leaders ignore his bitter attacks. Reuther and his crusade is not even on the agenda for the May 8 AFL-CIO Executive Council meeting.

There, the rest of labor's high command will be talking about cooperating with President Johnson.

Walter Reuther, amidst all his followers, appears alone, indeed. He may well have to test the strategy of solitude.

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- The navy is trying to suppress the fantastic story of a real - life Caine Mutiny, closely following the plot of the celebrated Herman Wouk Novel. This one happened not in World War II but aboard a radar picket destroyer on combat duty off Vietnam.

The junior officers even kept a "captain's madness log," as in the "Caine Mutiny," to use as evidence against their commanding officer. He is Lt. Cmdr. Marcus Aurelius Arnheiter and the "Mutiny" took place aboard the U.S.S. Vance.

The investigative report shows clearly, however, that Arnheiter was no Captain Queeg.

Here is the story the navy is trying to keep quiet:

A group of young officers had been operating the U.S.S. Vance more like a yacht than a warship until Arnheiter took command a few days before Christmas, 1965. At sea, they enjoyed a leisurely life, including movies every afternoon. At anchor, they went joy riding and water skiing in an outboard motorboat they had acquired ashore.

Discipline aboard the Vance was so relaxed that an enlisted crewman complained to his congressman: "No one knows or cares what you are doing. You get no recognition for keeping your gear up. In fact, no one knows whether it is working or not. The officers don't check us; they don't look at our logs. They don't inspect our gear or our spaces."

This letter got back to Rear Adm. Walter H. Baumberger, then commander of the cruiser destroyer force in the Pacific, who cited it in a notice to all his ships. Without mentioning names, he wrote: "The attached letter was recently received via a congressman... (it) points up the misuse of a specific individual and states quite eloquently the frustrations experienced by a number of our young bluejackets. It is my fervent hope that such a situation does not now exist in any of our ships."

SKIPPER CRACKS DOWN

To restore combat efficiency aboard the Vance, Arnheiter began cracking down. This spoiled the fun of his junior officers, who chafed under the new discipline.

Shortly after Arnheiter become Skipper, the ship was ordered to the war zone. Her mission was to patrol the Coast, intercept the smuggling of Communist contraband and bombard enemy targets on shore.

He mounted a .30 - caliber machinegun on the outboard runabout, trained the ship's crew in the use of the big three - inch guns and taught them how to use rifles in case they should have to repel boarders. Then he began patrolling close to the shore, searching the coves and inlets for suspicious junks. He also requested spotter planes to point out spotter planes to the ship's big guns.

The junior officers complained that he was taking unnecessary risks and that they could patrol by radar beyond the barrier reef 20 miles out.

Soon they began to plot against Arnheiter. Once he saw in the ward room an open copy of Herman Wouk's "Caine Mutiny Court Martial," the stage version of the original novel.

Meanwhile, three subordinates -- Lt. Ray Hardy, the executive officer; Lt. (J. G.) William Generous, the operations officer; and Ensign Louis Belmonte -- were compiling a long list of petty grievances against Arnheiter, entered by Belmonte in the "captain's madness log."

RELIGIOUS SERVICES

The trouble really began when Generous, a Catholic complained in a letter to a priest, Lt. Richard Osterman, that Arnheiter was compelling all hands to attend protestant services on the ship's fantail.

"Three times now," the Lieutenant wrote, "the crew has been ordered aft... For these euphemistic church calls... I cannot accept illegality and infringement of my constitutional rights. I seek relief from this burden, but I do so anonymously, once again for the sake of my family. Is there something that you can do?"

Unknown to Arnheiter, Chaplain Osterman registered a complaint with higher authorities. Ensign Belmonte, the Lay Catholic leader on board, pressed the charges in complaints to other chaplains.

Investigation developed that the skipper, an Episcopalian, had not been holding protestant services. Invocations and benedictions were offered, but were taken from the navy's own booklet of "Prayers At Sea." He had held these services in order to instill patriotism and prepare his men spiritually for combat.

One of Generous's specific complaints was that the crew had been called on to sing all four verses of "America", and that the ference in the fourth verse to "Our Fathers' God to Thee, Author of Liberty," had protestant connocations.

When the charges eventually were investigated, it was found "that although the nature of the initial lectures did have religious overtones, the tenor of the program subsequently changed to conform with the spirit of general order 21 to which objection could not reasonably be raised."

The other charges were even more petty, including the complaint that Arnheiter had declared candy "unfit for consumption" in order to give it to hungry Vietnamese children.

Prior to these findings, however, Arnheiter was abruptly removed from his command. He was neither informed of the charges against him nor given an opportunity to reply. The admirals acted precipitously out of concern for the ship's morale in a war zone.

But having made their decision, they refused to back down -- even after investigation proved the charges to be frivolous.

Thus Arnheiter was cashiered, in effect, for bringing discipline to his ship and pressing the war too vigorously.

Mrs. Larry Gene Eftink

Connie Margaret Gentry Is Bride of Larry G. Eftink

ORAN -- Palms, baskets of carnations, rose buds and greenery decorated the sanctuary of the Guardian Angel Catholic church for the Saturday morning wedding of Miss Connie Margaret Gentry and Larry Gene Eftink.

The Rev. Gervace Ingoldsby performed the double ring ceremony. The Guardian Angel school choir sang accompanied by Sister Sebastain, organist. The nuptial mass was served by Don Eftink, brother of the groom, and Mark Dannenmueller, cousin of the groom.

The former Miss Gentry is the daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth Gentry of Scott City. Eftink is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Eftink.

The birde, given in marriage by her godfather, Arthur Eftink, wore a formal gown of white nylon organza. It featured an oval neckline and long tapered sleeves. The front skirt was accented with embroidery. Soft gathers at the back of the skirt formed a fullness that swept into a full chapel train. Her four-tiered veil of imported English illusion was held secure by a headpiece of roses, seed pearls and crystals. She carried a cascade bouquet of white roses entwined with greenery and orange blossoms.

Mrs. Leslie W. White, Jr., of Scott City was matron of honor. Miss Wilma Hartle of Oxon Hill, Mid., and Miss Jane Eftink, sister of the groom were bridesmaids.

They wore floor-length gowns of nile green silk organza and cotton Cluny lace over taffeta. The sabrina necklines dipped low in the backs and were edged with Venetian lace. The lace was repeated at the bottom of the ruffles of the elbow-length sleeves. The skirts of the dresses were semi-controlled with soft inverted pleats around the waistlines. Watteau trains were attached at the backs of the necklines with tailored bows and the trains swept to floor length.

The attendants wore clusters of flowers securing bouffant veils of silk maline dyed to match the gowns. They each carried a single long stemmed red rose with white streamers.

David Jansen served as best man and Jimmie Eftink of Chaffee, cousin of the groom, and Dick Gentry of Scott City, brother of the bride, were groomsmen. Eddie Eftink of Perkins and Jerry Eftink of Chaffee served as ushers.

The flower girl was Angelia Richards, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gus Richards. She wore a pale green dress with a lace overskirt. She carried a basket of rose petals. Kevin Eftink, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Eftink of Perkins was ring bearer.

An all day reception was held at the Knights of Columbus hall following the wedding. The bride's table was covered with a green taffeta cloth overlaid with dark green net. Guests were served by Miss Judy Eftink and Miss Linda Eftink of Perkins. Mrs. Stanley Wallace was in charge of the guest book.

The new Mrs. Eftink is a 1965 graduate of Illmo - Scott City high school and the Cape Girardeau School of Beauty Culture. She is employed by Hazel's Beauty Shop in Illmo. Eftink is employed by Atlas Plastics in Cape Girardeau.

The couple will live in Oran.

BOOKS ON GARDENING bring readers to the library. Mrs. Wayne Woodard, 205 North Stoddard, scans a volume. Her daughter, Valenda, five, is with her.

Interest Sprouts on Garden Book Shelf

Considerable reading at the library is from special shelves.

Sikeston is a city of fine homes and gardens. It has numerous garden clubs. The interest is reflected in a garden shelf of books and Garden magazine in a periodical stall.

Greatest demand is for books on shrubbery and landscaping.

Subject matter of garden books really blooms - bugs, pruning, plant encyclopedia, gardens for young Americans, growing for showing, songs birds in the garden, flora in Missouri, flower family albun, wildflowers, trees, herb gardening, bulbs, easy ways to a beautiful garden, roses, flower arrangement, tuberous begonias, dried flowers, flowering trees, windowsill gardening, house plants, African violets, practical gardening.

Flowers in winter garden, arranging cut flowers, landscaping with vines, shrubs, flowering cactii, shady gardens, ornamental trees, camellias, iris, guide to gardening under lights, geraniums, garden pinks, how to make a cut-flower test, flower show, hydrangeas, evergreens, flowering shrubs, wild flowers, artificial flowers and budget landscaping.

The Missouri shelf has its devotees. Here are volumes on the state's history, folklore and government. There also are books with Missouri settings and fiction with other locale by Missouri authors. Copies of the Missouri Historical Review are available.

There are numerous books on a travel shelf, numerous guides, including the Life World library, the WPA series of guide books on some neighboring states and Missouri. These books and travel magazanes provide sound background before a trip anywhere in the world and relived memories for the returned traveler.

Some of the enduring, nonfiction books are those on the memorial shelf. These represent an extension of the personality of Sikeston residents no longer among the living. Often those who use this means of paying their respects to the dead give the library round sums.

In the absence of a request for a specific title, the staff tries to pick a book appropriate to the memory of the deceased of if they are unfamiliar with his tastes one that is in harmony with the interests of the donor.

There is some interest in the biography shelf.

Cookbooks also occupy a shelf. Cookie and candy recipes are the most popular.

Books on familiar finance, estate planning and on other economic topics are available as well as a basic book on money management -- The Kiplinger Book on Investing for the Years Ahead by John Hazard.

In Case Some of The Citizens Might Have Missed This Letter From Mr. Coleman Who Served As A Member Of The BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS For 28 Years

Mr. Charles L. Blanton, Jr.
Editor, Sikeston Standard
Sikeston, Missouri
Dear Charlie:

I have been asked several times the past few days what I thought about the Bond Issue to purchase the Missouri Utilities properties in Sikeston. I am absolutely for this 100 percent, and I think everyone else would be for it if they knew the real situation.

It is uneconomical and needlessly costly to have two utilities serve the same area.

It would be just the same as having two telephone companies or two gas or water companies to service Sikeston. It is a needless duplication of service, and costly too. With the addition of the 2,027 new customers, the Board of Public Works can better maintain its present low cost of electricity. Incidentally, the 2,027 new customers will get a lower rate than they now pay. Competition has nothing to do with the rates as the utilities rates are set by the Public Service Commission and the Public Works rates by the City. These rates, in both cases, must be set to pay expenses and make a reasonable profit. In our case, the profits accrue to the City.

I can assure you that there will be no RATE INCREASE - on the contrary, the buying of this property will help to maintain the present low rate that we now enjoy.

These will be revenue bonds and will be paid out of earnings. There will be NO TAXES. The light plant was built in 1931 with $150,000.00 bond issue!!!! Since that time, $5,291,065.30 has been invested in the system and there has never been a TAX DOLLAR SPENT ON THE PLANT - ALL OF THIS HAS BEEN PAID FROM EARNINGS FROM THE LIGHT PLANT.

There has been some question about the light plant not paying any taxes. It is true that it does not pay taxes. However, in place of taxes the light plant has contributed electricity for all public buildings and street lighting since it started in 1931. For 1966 this amounted to $48,504.00. If the City had to collect taxes to pay utility it would mean that your taxes would have to be raised 30 cents per 100 valuation.

So, there will be no taxes involved, no increase in rates, and a much better operating problem and continued free service to the City. This decision regarding the light plant is the most important one since the voting of the original bond issue. I cannot understand why everyone would not be for it. Let's make it a unanimous vote. The bond buyers will like this.

Yours truly,
E. P. Coleman, Jr.

Sub-District Finals Today

Bulldogs Club Wildcats

The Bulldogs, behind two-hit pitching of Rudy Manley and a 13-hit barrage, from his teammates, set the Bloomfield Wildcats down and out of the sub-district baseball tournament at VFW stadium yesterday afternoon, 12-1.

Manley's one-run pitching performance was topped by his 14 strikeouts and 15 putouts. Manley went five innings, in which he collected 14 strikeouts. The lone out was credited to the second basemen.

The offensive attack of the Dogs was too much for the Wildcats to bear as they pounded 13 hits and 12 runs in four innings. Mike Garner collected three hits in four times at bat while teammate Wayne Limbaugh went two for two. Sixteen men got into the game for the Dogs.

Bloomfield, who jumped to a 1-0 lead in the first inning on one hit and three Sikeston errors, was quickly set down.

Manley collected three strikeouts to end the inning after the run scored after two were out.

Coach Hal Lane's squad wasted little time in tying the score. Greg Bailey grounded out to the shortstop to start the bottom of the first but three successive hits by Limbaugh, Garner and Manley pushed across one run.

Limbaugh, Garner, Manley and Farris scored in the inning as the Dogs collected four hits and Bloomfield made two errors. Edwards collected the fourth hit of the inning and drove Manley and Farris around to score.

It was nothing but a rout the rest of the game. Manley shot down the second inning batters with strikeouts and collected three more in each of the fourth and fifth innings. The Bulldogs added four runs in the second, two in each of the third and fourth innings for their 12 runs. Bloomfield was held to no runs in its final four innings and collected only one hit.

Today's final game in the sub-district tournament will pit Sikeston against Richland and its left handed pitching star, Stan Gaylord. The winner will advance into district play at Sikeston. Game time is 3:30 p.m.

Golfers Take Fifth Win

BY ARNIE

The Bulldog golfers won their fifth consecutive match of the season yesterday by defeating the Tigers of Caruthersville, 167 - 191. The golfer's record for the year is five wins against one defeat.

Church Meyer led the Sikeston scorers with 40. He took medalist honors for the match one stroke ahead of Senior Charles Stamp, who carded a 41.

Ned Matthews and King Sidwell ran the total to 167 with a 43 apiece. The winning string on the Sikeston course is now 11.

Gary Lucy led the Caruthersville scorers. Lucy had a 45 ahead of Ricky Davis 47, Van McClendon 49, and Mike Abbott who finished with a .50.

Sikeston's 24 - stroke victory was Caruthersville's fifth defeat of the year. The Tigers are yet to win a meet.

Seniors David Whiteaker and Jim Hux each carded 47s for Sikeston. Caruthersville's other scorers were Pat Slentz 52 and Ken Wimberly 54.

Junior Chuck Meyer now leads the Sikeston team with a 41.5 average in the six first meets. He is followed close behind by Ned Matthews and Charles Stamp.

The Bulldog team average is 164.5, a respectable record. If the Dogs hold his average in the district meet in May, it could mean a trip to state.

Clay Will Appear, Will Not Take Oath

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Heavyweight champion Cassius Clay says he will not go into the Army "no matter what it costs me."

Clay told a news conference he would appear for induction in Houston next week, "but I won't take the oath."

For months, Clay has fought a losing battle to avoid the draft on grounds that military duty would be contrary to his Black Muslim religion.

Clay is slated for induction next Friday at Houston, the city he now calls his home. He had his case transferred there from his draft board in Louisville.

The champ came back to Louisville this week "to be with my people" during a controversy over an open-housing law.

"The situation in Louisville has a lot to do with my decision not to go in the Army but it's not the main reason," Clay said Thursday.

He appeared earlier in the week at a rally for advocates of open housing but did not march in the almost nightly demonstrations. The city has refused to pass such a law.

Clay said he would not enter the Army, even in a non-combatant role.

A spokesman for the draft board said if Clay refused to be inducted, he would be required to sign a paper stating his refusal. The case then would be turned over to the federal district attorney for disposition.

There was no immediate indication about the way Clay's action could affect the boxing title.

President Robert Evans of the World Boxing Association said it was too early to make a statement about the status of the case should Clay be imprisoned for refusing to serve in the Army.

The Justice Department said if Clay held to his plan, the Selective Service System presumably would recommend he be prosecuted.

Netmen Nab Second Win

The Bulldog tennis team defeated the Caruthersville Tigers yesterday 5-3 for its second victory of the season. The netmen's record for the year is two wins against three defeats.

In the singles division, number-one man, Hank Lippert, defeated the Tiger's Kenny Bruce 6-1 and 11-9.

Junior Bob McCord of Sikeston lost his match to Jim Hedricks 6-0 and 6-0.

Wythe Miller had his troubles yesterday. He lost to Jim Teroy of Caruthersville 2-6, 6-4, and 2-6.

Senior Bill Dickerson won easily over Mike Ownby in sets of 6-3 and 6-1.

Ron Hill can't be defeated. He won his fourth straight match of the year by defeating Terry Thomas 6-2 and 6-1.

Brad Crumpecker of Sikeston didn't lose a game as he defeated Jim Norman in sets of 6-0 and 6-0.

The Bulldogs split the doubles competition as the Dickerson and Lippert team got its revenge after losing Tuesday's match.

Miller and McCord were beaten by Bruce and Hendricks 6-0, 4-6, and 6-8.

Playing consistently Dickerson and Lippert defeated Teroy and Ownby 6-4 and 6-4.

The netmen will play host to the Tigers of Cape Girardeau Central in a dual meet at the high school Saturday at 10 a.m.

SHS Report

By Dan Spears

The northern conference track and field meet will be held this afternoon and night at the public schools stadium.

Cape Girardeau Central won the meet last year taking an easy victory. Kennett was its closest opponent with Sikeston taking fourth. Participating in the events will be Charleston, Cape Central Perryville, Jackson, Kennett, Poplar Bluff, and Sikeston.

The Kennett Indians are the pre - meet favorite with Charleston and Cape Central fighting it out for second place.

Quite a few school and meet records are expected to be broken today if the weather holds out and doesn't wet down the track.

Sikeston coach, Norman Lambert said that the track is in fine condition. He hopes for a big turnout. Preliminaries will begin at 4 p.m. The finals will be run at 7 p.m.

Advance Star Signs Letter Of Intent

POPLAR BLUFF -- A familiar face will be on the basketball scene when Three Rivers Junior College opens the season next year in Bill Morgan. He is a 6 foot guard that has had a very fine career at Advance high school.

He brings the total number of athletes to sign scholarships to eight. Bill has been an outstanding performer since his sophomore year. His first year to play on the varsity merited him with an honorable mention on the All Conference Team. His junior year he received the following honors: First team all conference, all class "M", first team on KWOC all district team, honorable mention on the all district team, and honorable mention all state. During his junior and senior year he lead his team in the scoring department.

The honors received by Bill his senior year were a repeat of his junior year with the exception that Advance enrollment dropped to class "S" after being in class "M" the previous year.

Morgan ranks as one of the finest shooters in Southeast Missouri and should give more scoring potential to the team. He is an outstanding ball handler and should give the other players a good run for one of the guard positions.

Coach Bob Cradic states:

"The eight players that have signed a letter of intent to attend Three Rivers College next year should give us a nucleus around which we can build a fine team. It will be difficult for five freshmen to compete against some of the more experienced teams but I believe that our lack of experience can be offset by a tremendous amount of desire. We still don't have a big man but we have good team size. The question remains as to whether these boys can jell into a working unit in just one season. Recruiting has been completed for some time and our schedule is nearing completion with an 18 game slate.

76ers Take 3-1 Edge In Series

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—"We want to win it Sunday," declared Coach Alex Hannum whose Philadelphia 76ers have the National Basketball Association title within their grasp.

Sharpshooting by Hal Greer, Chet Walker and Wally Jones plus a fantastic defensive performance by 7-foot 1-inch Wilt Chamberlain brought Philadelphia a 122-108 triumph over San Francisco's Warriors Thursday night and a 3-1 edge in their best - of - 7 final series.

Returning to Philadelphia for Sunday's battle, the crown appeared all but wrapped up for the 76ers, the first for Chamberlain since he joined the league in 1960.

"Wilt never played better," admitted Warrior Coach Bill Sharman. "Every time I looked up, he was blocking a shot. He must have blocked 15."

The big star also pulled down 27 rebounds and had 8 assists.

"I don't believe he ever has had a better defensive game," added Hannum who appears on the verge of gaining revenge on the Warriors who fired him after last season.

Jones hit 14 points in the first quarter and then suffered an injury to his right ankle. Greer took up the slack and, after only two free throws in the opening period, finished with 38 points for the night.

Walker unloaded in the final stanza with 14 and 33 total to insure victory before 15,117, the largest crowd over to watch pro basketball in San Francisco. Another 1,300 took in the game via closed - circuit television at the downtown Civic Auditorium.

The triple-pronged 76er attack compensated for a 43 - point output from the Warriors' Rick Barry.

The 30-year-old Greer commented, "For an old man, I guess I had a good game. Everyone took up the slack but we could not break the game open. We would get up by 15 and 17 and they would come back."

With three minutes left, the Warriors cut the edge to eight points but then it was Greer, with two free throws and a field goal, who broke it open.

Cards Suffer First Defeat

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

St. Louis, jolted out of the winning groove by San Francisco, hopes to get back on the track tonight against the Los Angeles Dodgers on the West Coast.

The Giants ended the Cardinals' winning streak at six games Thursday with a 7-5 victory at San Francisco. The win broke a Giant losing streak at six games.

The Kansas City Athletics, who fell, 2-0, to Cleveland Thursday, meet the Orioles tonight in Baltimore.

Bob Gibson, 2-0, is the scheduled starter for the Cardinals. Don Drysdale, 0-1, has been given the Los Angeles assignment.

A's Manager Alvin Dark tapped Jim Hunter, 1-0, to start against Baltimore and Tom Phoebus.

A five-run second inning gave the Giants the steam they needed to end the Cardinals' winning ways. Ken Henderson's two-run single highlighted the inning for the home team. A bases-filled error by Cardinal shortstop Dal Maxvill was a big factor in the inning.

Bob Bolin, aided by Lindy McDaniel, Bill Henry and Frank Linzy, was credited with the victory.

The Indians victory took the edge off an American League announcement Thursday that there is no rule against a team wearing white shoes.

Indians Manager Joe Adcock complained the white shoes worn by Kansas City interfere with a batter's ability to see the baseball.

Steve Hargan pitched the five-hit shutout for the Cleveland club. Lew Krausse was charged with the loss.

Cleveland scored its runs in the second inning. Fred Whitfield doubled, Duke Sims walked, Gus Gil singled and a throwing error by Ken Suarez accounted for the markers.

Senior Play At Matthews

MATTHEWS -- "Here Comes Charlie" by Jay Tobias was presented Friday in matinee and evening performances by members of the senior class. The three-act comedy was directed by Benton B. Conrad. Members of the cast were Kathy Morris, Joe Buchanan, Jeanice Griffin, Danny Lape, Sidney Fraley, Paula Huffstutler, Charles Conrad, Rita Burch, Marlene Davidson and Joe King. Promptors were Peggy Lathum, Barbara Johnson, Nancy Mydlowski, David Schneider and James Stobaugh.

Linda Cain was accompanist for the musical numbers presented between acts -- a musical reading, "The Three Trees" read by Marilyn Davis at the matinee and by Barbara Rogers in the evening. A senior girls chorus sang "O Soldier, Soldier" for a pantomime of Revolutionary War days by Nancy Mydlowski and Barbara Johnson. In charge of programs were Wanda Gail Plunk and Jerrilyn Lawson. Ushers were LaVerle Williams, Sharon McVay, Wanda Tillman, Evelyn Stidham, Donna Polk, and Linda Bledsoe. Judy Danels and Danny Joe Whitten sold tickets at the door.

Relatives and friends of Mrs. Sarah Raper, who has recently moved into a new home, complimented her with a housewarming last Thursday evening. Attending were Mrs. Bob Throop, Mrs. Clifford Laird, Mrs. Kenneth Cauthron, Mrs. Elizabeth Parker, Mrs. Linzle Parker, Mrs. A. W. Wagley, Mrs. Dorsey Spradling, Mrs. Shirley Littleton, Mrs. A. L. Odom, Mrs. L. D. Waters, Mrs. George Gaines, Mrs. Boyd Raper and Mrs. Harvey Kelso.

Mr. and Mrs. Webb Sibley accompanied their son, Pvt. Michael Sibley, to St. Louis Friday where he took a plane to San Francisco, Calif. He was to leave from there for assignment in Viet Nam.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Lomax returned Sunday to their home in Zephyr Hills, Fla., after visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Lomax.

Visiting here during the weekend with their brother, Charles Mainord, and sister, Mrs. Retta Kellett in Sikeston, were Mrs. Wendell Shryock and Fred Mainord of Anderson, Ind., and Ray Mainord of St. Louis, and Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Mainord of Jackson. Mrs. Shryock and Mrs. Kellett visited Sunday afternoon with their aunt, Mrs. L. D. Waters.

Mrs. W. C. Moore, Mr. and Mrs. Burl Gives, Mrs. Wayne Greene and Fred Moser visited with the family of the late Mrs. Dorothy Hill at the funeral home in Hayti last Tuesday evening. Mrs. Moore, Mrs. Clarence Sutton, Mrs. Maude Rice, Mrs. Clifford Sutton, Mrs. Charles Lumsden, Mrs. L. D. Waters and Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Waters attended the funeral on Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. Douglas Zilafro and baby son have been dismissed from the Missouri Delta Community hospital at Sikeston where he was born on April 6. The child is the first in the family and has been named Troy Douglas. Mrs. Douglas is the former Miss Sheila Leech.

Mrs. A. L. Odom fractured a leg in a fall while fishing Saturday afternoon.

The Matthews Community Club will meet at the home of Mrs. Lloyd Eby Thursday at 8 p.m. A program on "Take-off Meals -- Salads" will be presented by Mrs. Eby and Mrs. Lester King.

Mr. and Mrs. Herschel Yates had as an overnight guest last Thursday his brother, James Yates, of Honolulu, Hawaii. Yates, who is employed by an airlines and was here on a business trip, on Friday accompanied his mother, Mrs. Henry Yates, as far as Denver, Colo., on a trip to Albuquerque, N.M., where she will visit her daughter, Mrs. Albert Jensen. Mrs. Yates Sr. has been a patient at the Shuffit Nursing Home no. 3 for the past few months.

Steele Musicians Will Be Soloists

JONESBORO, Ark. -- Fourteen soloists from the Arkansas State University division of music will be presented in a recognition recital Monday at 8:15 p.m. in Wilson auditorium.

Among the performers will be Hollie Farris, trumpet; and Sarah Carter, soprano, both of Steele, Mo.

Armed Forces

(H0579) USS JAMES C. OWENS (DD-776) (FHTNC) -- Seaman Jerry F. Davis, USN, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arden Davis of Gray Ridge, Mo., is in the Caribbean taking part in a joint service amphibious training exercise named "Clove Hitch III," as a crewmember aboard the destroyer USS James C. Owens.

His unit comprises a segment of more than 21,000 men of the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps and Puerto Rican National Guard who will be participating.

The two-week exercise began April 15, and is designed to provide training in joint "over-the-beach" landing operations. In addition to exacting close cooperation between the services, it will refine the capabilities of the Atlantic Command to respond quickly in any emergency.

Once ashore, the amphibious forces will be conducting counter-querrilla operations, opposed by mock aggressors.

War Mixes Boredom, Panic for Navy Pilots

ABOARD USS ENTERPRISE (AP) — The air war over North Vietnam is "hours of boredom and seconds of sheer panic," says one pilot. It brings out a rare mesh of the physical and mental in the naval pilot.

The high-performance A4 Skyhawks, F4 Phantoms, A6 Intruders and RA5 Vigilantes on the deck of the Enterprise compare with speeding bullets. Instruments tell the pilot where the plane is going. The aircraft responds to only the most carefully considered control.

Somehow, the pilot maintains a sense of order as he careens into a rollover where the green of the ground and blue of the sky spin above his canopy.

In a dive, the trees may shoot up, or dash out the left side of the eye in favor of a river, a field, and another river —in 10 seconds.

Pulling out of a dive, G forces cram the pilot into his seat. An air-pressure suit keeps all his blood from settling into his boots.

In taking off the pilot is hurled down a catapult, from zero to 150 miles per hour in three seconds and 50 yards. Coming home he lands at 130 m.p.h., trying to catch a cable with a tail hook he cannot see. This goes on in fog, haze, sunshine, darkness, and when the tepid rain of the Tonkin Gulf sweeps over the deck.

Naval pilots live in twos in air-conditioned quarters. A picture of a girlfriend, or a wife and three children in a park somewhere, is on the wall. There are tape recorders, a small ice box with fresh cheese. A brisk shower and good food are just a few steps down the passageway.

The pilot stays home one day, flies three missions the next. Every time he is committed to a target there are flak, streams of red tracers searching for him like water out of a hose, and surface to air missiles that seem like Roman candles.

Around North Vietnamese railroad yards, power plants and bridges are dug-in SAMS and 37, 57, 85, and 100mm "barrels" or flak guns, manned 24 hours, warned by radar and flushed out with thousands of hand-held machine guns and rifles.

"These people are not defenseless," says a veteran of 52 missions. "I swear everyone of them has a gun."

The inventiveness, savvy and training of the pilot, coupled with bales of computerized intelligence, and defensive equipment, make repeated attacks possible.

The three Navy carriers in the Tonkin Gulf exact swift retribution. Bombs, rockets, aircraft and pilot can be mated quickly to respond to fresh intelligence.

The coast is 20 minutes away. The Air Force must come farther, from Thailand. One day the Enterprise alone launched more strikes than the entire Air Force. At the beginning of the war Navy pilots flew 80 per cent of the sorties. Now they average slightly more than 50 per cent.

Convict With Cancer Asks For Reprieve

NEW YORK (AP) — A convict with terminal cancer has appealed to Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller to commute his one-year prison term and permit him to spend his remaining time with his wife and four children.

"I'm guilty," William F. Kane, 30, the prisoner, said. He is serving time in the prison ward of Long Island's Meadowbrook Hospital for a $30 stickup.

"But I can't understand why I must serve a life sentence for my crime," he added. "It's only a year's sentence, but that may be more than I have left."

Spencer Steele, one of the prisoner's attorneys, said a letter to Rockefeller requesting executive clemency for Kane was mailed Wednesday.

A spokesman for Rockefeller said the governor does not comment on such requests until he has decided on them.

Kane said he hoped the governor would permit him "the dignity of dying at home with my family."

Although the hospital is not far from the Valley Stream, N.Y., home where his wife and four children reside, Kane has not been able to see the youngsters in four months because of limited visiting facilities.

He was sentenced to a year in Nassau County jail last January after pleading guilty to petty larceny charges before County Judge Martin Kolbrener. The judge also gave him a suspended 7½-15-year term on robbery charges.

It was the latest in a string of felonies involving Kane since 1957. Kolbrener said he acted "leniently" in the case, "a defendant with his kind of record would ordinarily be hit with the maximum."

Kane agreed. "By all rights, a one-year sentence is a real break on the charges I was hit with. But in my condition you might as well make it 10 or 20 years," he said.

Kombrener said there is nothing he can do now, explaining that once a prisoner begins serving a sentence he cannot be placed on probation or resentenced.

Guards at the hospital say Kane looks forward to weekly visits by his wife Joan.

"I want Bill home," she said Wednesday night. "I want to be the one caring for him at the end."

PAUL FLOWERS
GREENHOUSE

Let Venice be the city of canals, and Chicago hog butcher of the world; Denver the city a mile high and Philadelphia the city of brotherly love; Boston, home of the bean and the cod; and New Orleans the city care forgot; but for Griggsville, Ill., reserve the distinction of Purple Martin Capital of the Nation.

If you are alert as you go north or south on Illinois state route 107, about 25 miles west of Jacksonville, you'll see Griggsville, and if you're there between mid March and mid August, you'll see "America's most wanted bird," in impressive numbers. . .the town's human population is 1,240, but the purple martins outnumber folk many times over. Griggsville likes martins, and martins like Griggsville.

Indeed, the town's tabloid monthly newspaper, bears the name "The Purple Martin Capital News - From Griggsville, Ill.," and devotes all of its space to the friendly birds and other items (with pictures) of wildlife. As if that were not enough, J. L. Wade has written a book, "What You Should Know About the Purple Martin," 218 pages of text and pictures about the birds, including a timetable of arrivals and departures, not only for Griggsville, but also Tennessee and many other places. We should see them in the Volunteer State any time between March and Oct. 1.

Up to this moment, I have been able to take purple martins or leave them alone, but after reading the book and newspaper, I am developing a warm affinity for them, since each martin eats about 2,000 mosquitoes or other noxious insects each day catching them on the wing;) they adore living in manmade houses; they discourage pigeons, sparrows and starlings; and they police up their quarters, bundling up waste and taking it far from the space they share with people.

What better neighbors could you want?

Other communities welcome the birds; the reader board at a Holiday Inn in Houston bore the gladsome tidings, "It Is Purple Martin Time," and Sears Garden Center at Qunicy, Ill., boasts that the birds keep the area bug free.

Griggsville bristles with specially designed houses for purple martins; the cots are made of aluminum, and stand on telescoping poles so that when the birds are gone, they can be lowered for servicing and to rid them of free-loading sparrows who might have moved in after the martins have migrated.

Aficionados of the purple martins deny emphatically that their birds eat honeybees; they lay the blame for this crime on the eastern kingbird, commonly known as "bee martin," but it is not a martin at all, but a member of the flycatcher family. James Audubon exonerated the purple martin as a foe of honeymakers, and later observers, including William J. Mellor of Eureka Springs, Ark., testified that his colonies of bees and purple martins co-exist quite agreeably.

Well, all this may be for the birds, but it sounds like a good thing.

Dinner Guests At Bell City

BELL CITY -- Mrs. Ira Allen and her son - in - law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Garner of Cape Girardeau, were Friday dinner guests of Mrs. Allen's sister, Mrs. Bell Shrum, and her daughter, Mrs. Lillie Hester. Mrs. Shrum and Mrs. Hester have sold their home in Bell City to Marion Green and will move to Meridian, Miss., in July. Green lives on a farm southwest of town and will move here when the house is vacated.

Mrs. Lincoln Sherer and her sisters, Mrs. Norris Edwards and Mrs. Lynn Mouchette, both of Sikeston, left Wednesday by jet airplane for Washington, D. C., to visit their brother's family, Capt. and Mrs. H. S. Matthews, and to attend the change of command ceremonies at Norfolk, Va. Capt. Matthews took command of his ship USS Hermitage. The ceremony took place on board ship. They stayed at Norfolk until Saturday and returned home Sunday. Capt. Matthews has been in the navy 27 years.

The April meeting of the PTA was an open house at the schools. Students' work was on display in their home rooms. Mrs. Jack Spencer is president.

Mrs. Myrtle Dunlap had as weekend guests her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Henley, a granddaughter, Mary Sue Sullivan, and her fiance, Douglas Wondel, all of St. Louis.

James Manley of Belt Buckle, Tenn., was an overnight guest of Lincoln Scherer Sunday. Manley was enroute to Leeton to visit his cousins, Mr. and Mrs. John Armstrong.

Mr. and Mrs. James DeLay entertained over the weekend Mr. and Mrs. Charles Brown and son Edward of Springfield, Ill., another son, Otto Dietrich of Cape Girardeau, and their daughter Diane, a student at Southeast Missouri State College.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Wood had as recent guests his sister, Mrs. Luther Moore, and Gayle McCowin, both of Atlanta, Ga. Mrs. Moore also visited her grandson, Jim Sims of Atlanta, a senior at Southeast Missouri State College. On Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Woods had as dinner guests their children, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Stephens and family and Mr. and Mrs. Gary Woods and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Gary Woods and children were in St. Louis Wednesday to be with her mother, Tony Lewis, who is seriously ill in a hospital. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edd Lewis, formerly of Bell City.

Economy Shows Steady Growth in Bootheel

JEFFERSON CITY -- The economy has been showing steady growth in Southeast Missouri, the Missouri state division of commerce and industrial development, reports. However, there have been temporary setbacks. Approximately 375 employes are involved in a temporary two - month shutdown of Marquette Cement company in Cape Girardeau. Fifty employes may be affected by a partial closing of a sports specialty factory in Chaffee. High inventories are responsible.

The 1966 crop season was plagued with seasonal problems, but overall it was a good year. Although the cotton crop was 43 per cent below 1965, there was little drop in farm income with the substitution of soybeans. Both wheat and soybeans set new records. The change in the 1967 feed grain program allows more acres to be planted and makes the future outlook good.

The number of housing permits reached a post war low for the district. An easing of credit policy is underway but will take some time before home building industries rebound.

Large projects are authorized or underway in district cities. Cape Girardeau projects include a $600,000 building for KFVS television and radio, $1,400,000 federal building, $775,000 vocational high school, and additional facilities for the college. Poplar Bluff has a $400,000 mental retardation clinic and a $300,000 improvement in the city utilities scheduled for 1967. Sikeston will also build a $400,000 mental retardation clinic and is adding a new industries--Scheveille Home Manufacturing company. Educational and medical construction needs will provide additional stimulus in the district.

The positive factors for consideration are: new and expanded industries coming to the area, planned commercial construction, federal grants, agricultural production prospects high and a continued high level of employment. The uncertainties are: amount of credit easing for residential construction, inventory control, Viet Nam war involvement and tax increases. These factors balance to indicate continuation of business growth at a slow steady pace.

In Charleston bank deposits rose 20.7 per cent in October, November and December of 1966 over the same quarter in 1965 from $14,450,600 and $17,448,400; postal receipts declined 2.2 per cent from $21,900 to $21,400; electric current(kilowatt hours) climbed 1.6 per cent from 4,076,700 to 4,142,800; telephones in service from 2,228 to 3,371. a 4.4 per cent gain; gas meters in service from 1,504 to 1,550, up 3 per cent.

Residential building permits in Charleston for the same comparable periods rose 115.5 per cent from $24,500 to $52,500; total commercial permits in the 1966 quarter $3 million, none in 1965.

Chinese Lose Favor in Indonesia

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — Communist China, once Indonesia's great friend and ally, has become a symbol of hate here, and the million or so Chinese aliens in this country are feeling the effects.

An officially sponsored anti-Peking line has combined with traditional anti - Chinese sentiments among Indonesia's Moslem people to create an atmosphere of tension for the Chinese.

This situation developed following the 1965 coup d'etat attempt organized by the pro-Peking Indonesian Communist party, PKI. Communist China was accused of having a hand in it.

The coup was smashed by army forces led by Gen. Suharto, now acting president. The collapse of the Red movement triggered a massive anti-Communist campaign throughout Indonesia in which hundreds of thousands were slain. The PKI was destroyed and its remnants were driven underground.

Since then, Chinese aliens, most of whom owe their allegiance to Peking, have become virtually equated with Communists.

Stern regulations limit the activities of Chinese and subject them to special taxation. They have been banned from trading, their chief livelihood, in such outlying areas as Sumatra. In Jakarta they have been denied permanent residence.

Boycott of Chinese goods is being fostered and Chinese-owned shops are liable to closure by the military.

Peking has been linked with the distribution here of pamphlets in Chinese characters, urging local Chinese to resist the Suharto government.

Accounts of Peking's tirades against Suharto's "new order," labeling it reactionary and fascist, are carried by the official news agency Antara and reprinted in newspapers.

Reports of Red Guard extremism, particularly against Chinese Moslems, are used by Moslem groups here to warn against communism.

Diplomatic relations with Peking are close to the snapping point. There are demands from militantly anti-Communist student and Moslem organizations that the last threads be cut.

Foreign Minister Adam Malik has indicated that the ties will continue at least until a settlement has been reached on the question of repatriating Chinese who want to go back to the mainland.

"What do we do with one million Chinese?" Malik has asked.

When those Chinese who want to leave finally go, they are not likely to be allowed to take much with them.

One military official commented recently:

"Long ago the Chinese came to Indonesia emptyhanded and nobody had invited them to come. They should leave as they came."

PRODUCE PURCHASES
By WOOLWORTH'S
SETS NEW RECORD

The amount of pork and poultry purchased by the F. W. Woolworth Co. from Missouri and other poultry and pork producing areas during 1966 reached a new record for the sixth straight year.

The company purchased more than 6,075,000 pounds of poultry and 2,760,000 pounds of pork during 1966, said H. W. Bode, vice president of restaurant operations from the variety and department store chain.

Pointing out that it is a policy of Woolworth's to buy locally where possible, he said, "this policy benefits not only local wholesalers and retailers but many others in the state employed in production and distribution."

Mr. Bode noted that Woolworth's now serves in all 50 states more than one million people each day through 1,754 luncheonettes, 13 in-store cafeterias, 13 Harvest House cafeterias with stores, and 8 free-standing Harvest House restaurants. These facilities can seat 93,836 persons at one time, he said. Indicative of the size of the company's food operations are these totals of items served last year: 19,turkey dinners, 6,950,000 pieces of apple pie, and over 133 million cups of coffee.

The Woolworth executive predicted that purchases would increase during 1967 because of the anticipated increase in consumer spending and a continuation of the company's expansion program.

"We plan to open 37 new restaurant facilities during the coming year, as well as enlarge and remodel others," he said.

A youngster, lunching with his mother, told her that his new teacher is "mean, but fair." "How's that?" asked his mother. "Oh, she's mean to everyone."

The Dominant Note

BY JOHN GOULD
in the Christian Science Monitor
Rivoli, Italy
All Saints Day, 1966

Italy grows some of the most beautiful apples I've ever seen, but the flavor is a lot like a 10-cent sawdust baseball. I grow apples in Maine, and Maine grows about as many as Italy, and the difference is as great as their distance apart.

The market places abound in beautiful fruit, and I am gorging on delicacies truly not found in our markets at home. But the apples of Italy prove that beauty really is only skin deep, and I have crooked trees on my pasture lane in Maine that put more flavor in one scrub apple than Italy grows into a bushel.

We have driven over 4,000 miles in six countries before tackling the Brenner Pass to what lies beyond the Alps. In that distance we saw exactly one traffic accident, and that was in Belgium. Two bicyclists came together, and they were speaking with spirit to the policeman who was making notes on a little pad. Other than disruffled feelings, the damage was all to a loaf of bread one of the participants had on his handlebars. In this respect, loss was total. But we have been in Italy four days and we have seen five major traffic collisions involving automobiles, and I think I have figured out the reason, and solution.

It is the foolish toot. The law here is that when you wish to pass an automobile ahead you blink your left directional lights, toot your horn, and pass. Back home in Maine we used to have a law that was about like this. The law said if you tooted to pass the vehicle ahead must "yield the right of way." I heard lawyers cite this in court in days gone by. The law, of course, derived from the days of dirt roads when everybody drove up in the middle, and it didn't presume that the fellow on ahead was going to climb a tree or turn off in a bog to let you go by.

Since those days, Maine has advance to what we call the "last clear chance" philosophy. Whether you toot or not, whether you have the right or not, the courts tend to place the blame for a collision on the driver who had the last clear chance to avoid it. But in Italy they still regard the toot as the dominant note in the symphony of traffic. Here, they expect you to climb a tree or go off in the gulch.

If I could spell Italian or knew the present proconsul in Rome, I would write a letter, because this toot business is at least 40 years out of date. Blowing a horn is no aid to safe driving. And to the poor tourist, who is me, the constant din is a scourge upon the land. An Italian drives at 140-km. an hour and nobody toots at him. But I want to see the beauties of this incomparable country, and at 35 good American mph. I get nothing but toot, toot, toot.

Everybody passes me. The villa and the ruins mean nothing to an Italian - he wants to pass. I want to see the apple trees and the olive groves. So I am peeped, beeped, and tooted to a frenzy. I drive carefully. (Editor's Note - Gould has since escaped from Italy, and he did not have an incident or accident there, and he reports that he never touched his horn button once.) Gould resumes: The joker in this is rather nice. My car, although European - made, is equipped for American use. I have a horn that blats like a Holstein cow with her tail caught in the tie-up door. The Italian autos have a modest tootle that, individually, is small, although disturbing in the aggregate.

I have learned a marvelous thing about languages here in Italy. When I was a student I neglected Italian. My wife, who speaks only Maine and Boston, has done much better here than I have. She waves her hands, points, beckons, and makes odd noises, and comes up with things when I can't spin a thread. Today in the market place I got some apples, a bit of cheese, some apricot juice, and a cabbage. We had driven eight kilometres and stopped to have a roadside lunch, and we opened the bundle, and there was a cabbage. I did not buy a cabbage. I didn't even pay for a cabbage. If I were Abraham Lincoln I would drive back and return it. We gave it to a man directing traffic by some construction work. He thanked us and held up 37 automobiles so we could go through. My wife keeps saying that she can't speak any foreign tongue, but at least she never stole a cabbage. And I have to admit this is an academic fact. She seems to have the knack of communication.

It was fun to visit Virgil in Mantua. His statue makes him appear to be pondering a spondee, and I thought I heard an ictus or two. We paused in Assisi and in the market place saw dressed - out songbirds displayed for sale - a plain fact which can be assessed variously by him who pleases. Suumcuique, Garibaldi is looking fit. The riprap along the roads to Rome are of finest Parian marble. Or Lapis Lazuli. Yet there is an anti-climax to Italy for the student of the classics. The towns on yon distant hillside are not so lovely when you get to them - the Odes of Horace fit better than the masonry, the rivers are muddy, the tourist in Venice should either be a newlywed or have a vivid imagination. Gondolas with outboard motors? Veni, vidi, arrivederci.

Senate Has Fun With Women's Bill

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The Missouri Senate had a lot of fun today with a bill to set up a 15-member commission on the status of women.

In the midst of the quips, Sen. John E. Downs, D-St. Joseph, said the original mistake was made when men gave women the right to vote.

At that point the presiding officer introduced a group of 71 members of a Carroll County Women's Club. They were seated in the upper gallery right behind Downs, whose district includes Carroll County.

Downs looked over his shoulder and asked the chair to remind them of the rule against throwing things from the gallery.

The bill was finally advanced 18-6 after more hilarity. The bill would make statutory the present commission on the status of women appointed by the governor.

Bills to make mozarkite, a form of chert, the official state rock, and galena, which is lead ore, the official state mineral, also were advanced in the same humorous mood.

Altogether the Senate advanced seven bills on its heavy calendar before adjourning for the weekend. They included measures to:

Set up an election study commission to review Missouri's tangled election laws and report to the 1969 legislature.

Increase the number of boat commission employes from 15 to 25.

Let St. Louis use parking meter revenue to build a parking garage near Kiel Auditorium.

Raise the pay of St. Louis policemen at a cost of about $1.1 million a year, effective next February. Lower ranks would get an 8 per cent increase and officers above sergeant would get 6 per cent more.

New Bogart Cult Springs Up in Younger Generation

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — The late Humphrey Bogart has become the center of a cult, most of whose members are so young they can only have seen his films in their endless television reruns or in revivals.

Joe Hyams, a former Hollywood newspaperman and author of a book, "Bogart," believes that he understands why Bogart is popular today with fans young enough to be his children.

"Bogart was always cool and loose, the way they'd like to be," he said. "His voice was a rasp and he even had a lisp, but he was tough outside while there was something warm inside. He may be partly father image, but there's also something about him that they can identify with."

Hyams served as production consultant for "Bogart," a documentary about the actor which will be broadcast on ABC next Sunday and found the assignment presented problems unknown to a book author but also revealed facets of his subject that literary research left concealed.

Hyams found himself watching endless hours of old films.

"It was fascinating to watch him develop," he said. "He always had a natural way of taking a woman in his arms, but it became smoother."

Hyams also observed that in their many films together both Bogart and James Cagney invariably wound up repeating almost identical closing lines and even wore clothes they had used in earlier films.

Except for Cary Grant and perhaps a couple of others, Hyams thinks that film stars don't come in Bogart's dimensions today.

The six McLendon radio stations served formal notice on the music industry Wednesday by advertisements in trade journals that they were tired of records with "raunchy" lyrics and tired of complaints from listeners.

Starting May 15, the stations will refuse to consider playing any record submitted without a printed copy of the lyrics.

Gordon B. McLendon, president of the chain, said he was "disturbed at the lyrics and sounds of many records popular with the youth of America.

Q&A
on cigarette smoking and heart disease
Q Whether or not you've smoked a long time, do your risks go down when you quit?
A YES. The death rate from heart attack decreases among those who give up cigarette smoking, until it is close to the death rate of people who have never smoked. When you stop smoking, some body tissues that have been damaged — such as in the lungs or bronchial tubes —gradually return toward normal.

The POWER of FAITH

By WOODI ISHMAEL

VIETNAM CHAPLAINS, PART I

Major Pham-Minh-Hú'a is the parachute jumping Chief of Catholic Chaplains for the Vietnam Air Force.

Father Hú'a, a fifth generation Catholic, has found his entire life sustained by the power of faith. Born and raised in a small town south of Hanoi in North Vietnam, Father Hú'a studied for the priesthood at Saint Sulpice Seminary in Hanoi and Bhat-Bien Seminary. But in 1954 he realized what the future held in the north. He, with his two brothers and three sisters made their way south to Saigon.

For the past ten years he has been a military chaplain and the past four years have been with the Air Force. Father Hú'a not only ministers to the spiritual needs of Vietnamese Catholics, but others. Even American G.I.s go to him for spiritual direction and help. When he parachutes into an area where he is needed, race, creed or color make no difference.

Father Hú'a is dedicated also to promoting his country's future. He is a commissioner and district leader of the Boy Scouts in Vietnam, and spends much of his energy furthering the aims of Scouting.

"We do not have to give up our cultural and historical heritage as an Oriental to be a Christian", says Father Hú'a, "for with the best of both the combination is good."

The Church and Air Pollution

What is the spiritual atmosphere you are breathing? Quite a bit has been written recently about air pollution but quite apart from the physical environment our life context can be stale and stifling when we have not cleared the air with prayer, worship, and a renewed awareness of the presence of the living God in His love. We feel you might find the atmosphere at Trinity Baptist Church refreshing and would invite you to visit with us Sunday at 110 E. Center Street. Also, when you have time take a drive out on Highway 61 to the north edge of town and see our new building under construction.

Sincerely

COLLEGE EDUCATION FUNDS - TAX - FREE THROUGH U. S. SAVINGS BONDS.....

U. S. Savings Bonds are bought and held for many reasons -- both personal and patriotic. One purely practical reason is tax advantage -- especially attractive when E Bonds are purchased to create "tax - free" college - education funds.

E Bonds may be registered in the child's name, with a parent or the purchaser as beneficiary (but not as a co-owner). At the end of the first year of Bond purchasers, a Federal income - tax return is filed in the name of the child, listing the increase in Bond value (interest) as income to the child.

Filing this one return establishes "intent", and no further returns need to be filed to prove intent, as long as Bond interest, plus other income, comes to less than $600. No tax is due until the income exceeds $900.

Thus, when the child's Bonds are redeemed to meet college costs, the accrued interest is free from income tax. A copy of the tax return filed the first year should be retained as proof of intent.

Tax savings can be realized another way. Simply wait until the child begins to cash the Bonds to pay college expenses. The youngster then files his or her own tax return each year, reporting the full amount of interest on redeemed Bonds as income. If that interest, plus any other income, totals less than $900, no tax is owed at all.

Remember, however, that this tax advantage applies only to Bonds registered in the child's name as owner -- the coownership form of registration may not be used for such purpose (unless the child's own funds are used in the purchase).

Banquet Honors Top Students

MATTHEWS -- The Rev. James Hackney, pastor of the First Baptist church at Sikeston, addressed the Matthews R-5 high school honor roll students and their parents at the annual dinner sponsored by the Parent-Teacher Association Tuesday evening.

He listed as requirements for a successful life a sense of purpose or destiny, duty, preparation and a devotion to God.

The moral tone of a nation, he emphasized, is set by the training given in the home, school and church. In conclusion he urged the students to think life through and to adhere to the standards set by God.

Joe Buchanan, president of the student council, served as toastmaster and the invocation was given by Mike Geske. About 150 attended the dinner prepared by school cafeteria personnel, with assistance in serving from PTA mothers and girls from the home economics classes.

Tables were decorated with placemats in green and white printed with the recipe for a good school. White carnations, yellow chrysanthemums and sprigs of fern centered the tables at intervals with a large floral arrangement at the speakers table.

Roll call of classes was made by the highest ranking student in each class and presentation of honor certificates was made by Principal Benton B. Conrad.

Receiving the merit award "M" for scholastic achievement were:

SPRINGTIME'S DOGWOOD BLOSSOMS

The flowering dogwood is probably the most welcome blossom in America. When it appears we all know that springtime has arrived. Blooming early in the spring before the leaves appear, the blossom is really a tiny cluster of flowers surrounded by four white leaves that only look like petals.

Whether we are looking at leaves or blossoms — it is still America's most beautiful sight in early spring.

Flowers or potted plants are always most welcome to a shut-in, and sending them is a very special way to say, "Get well soon." Call GR1-5777 we'll deliver them.

#39 In A Series To Acquaint You With The Churches In This Area.

THIS WEEK SALUTING

St. Francis Xavier Church

CHRISTENDOM

The title of the article describes in a word the world of Christianity. The almost fantastic Western Civilization of our day owes a great deal of its greatness to the early Christian world. Some of us like to think that we were singularly blessed by God to the exclusion of other peoples. This of course is not true. We are all of us blessed by God in that we are all of us created in His Image. But it was the early Church that developed this image of God in us. Christ sent His Apostles, "To preach and teach all nations." The pilgrim Church was not content to remain static and to occupy only the western shores of the Mediterranean Sea. It moved into the structure of the Roman Empire. It was a drastic change for the Romans. They were Pagan and Hedonistic. Christianity was and is Monotheistic and its philosophy is best summed up in the words of its Founder, "This commandment I give you that you love one another. If your enemy strike your right cheek turn the other side. Do good to them who hate you." The mystique of the doctrine seemed to seize the people and many not content with living up to the doctrine of Christ now began to take the direction given to the young man of the Gospel story, "Go sell what thou hast, give to the poor and follow me." And the Age of Monasticism began. The theme of the times began to be what St. Augustine later called in his, "The City of God," "We have no other existence than for God."

This motivation carried men into the north of Europe where they won the fierce tribes into the gentleness of the imitation of Christ. Boniface, the apostle to the Germans, Sts. Cyril and Methodius who won over the slaves to Christianity, St. Patrick who went to Ireland to sew the seed that was for the sixteen following centuries to bear so much fruit. As these and the numberless others of their like went, they established their monastic schools which were the forerunner of the great universities that were to follow and to move into the second millenium and the thirteenth century, the golden one, that rivaled in learning and achievement in the arts and sciences even the great century in which we now dwell. As the monasteries were established the people moved around them for the purpose of the education of their children. Hence the beginning of the cities and the gradual migration of the people from the land. This brought about the problems that are inherent in the crowding of cities. The growth of the cities brought about the establishment of the Guilds which organized the crafts. It provided for the education of young men in the crafts which were the manufacturing beginnings as we know it today. The journeymen after they had learned their trades from the Masters traveled to other cities. This opened up the communications and spread the fruits of the learning. I mention these things to show the growth of a civilization which, a few hundred years later, brought its abilities and its culture and know-how to our own land.

It is a matter of the history of the growth of education in America that it was fostered entirely in the early colonial days by the several churches that had established colonies in the new land. It was their ministers who were the schools first teachers and on the college level it saw the establishment of Yale, Harvard, William and Mary, Dartmouth, University of Pennsylvania and Georgetown in Washington, DC. Even before the War for Independence from Great Britain. The public school system as we have it today did not function until after the War between the States. In the mean time it was the churches that maintained the schools especially for the teachers, that enabled the public schools to have a source for its need of teachers. This was in fulfillment of the command of Christ to His Apostles, to preach, but not just that but as well to teach, and not just a few, or the elect or the chosen but all peoples. If we are looking for the fountainhead of Democracy, herein we can find it.

Similarly, in the very early days of Christ's Public Life, in The Sermon on the Mount, Christ tells the teachers of the Law, I have not come to change the Law but to give knowledge of it. So too His Church immediately, even though it was oppressed and suppressed by the Roman Empire urged its people to obey the King to keep the Law. St. Paul in his letter to Peter who has been especially abused by the government of Rome, urges him to constancy, telling of Christ, that, "He was abused but did not abuse in return. When He suffered, He did not threaten, but he entrusted Himself to Him who judges justly." Many historians writing about this amazing growth of Christianity in such a climate of opposition point out that it was this very imitation of the gentle Christ, which won over the Romans and caused them to say in admiration, "See the Christians how they love one another.

To say that Christianity always maintained this way of life is to give a lie to the history of Europe and the Western Hemisphere. For though its Founder was divine, His followers were of flesh and blood and subject to all the shortcomings that the flesh is heir to. But there have been enough of His followers to keep the Faith and like most of us all, to at least want to follow in His way that the world essentially is good. I shudder to think what it would be today if He had not brought the Light into the world.

Time To Begin New Road Toward Peace For Nation

WHAT HAS BECOME of the dove who carried an olive branch? Did this symbol ever exist or were there always eagles who appeared dangerous and stately and always forboding hammers and sickles. Peace, peace, where have you flown?

Through war our ancestors have dealt blow after blow for peace. They have attempted to force one another to live in harmony. Always one battle after another. The American Revolution, the Civil War, World War I, World War II, the Korean War, the war in Viet Nam, and all those wars before and all the wars which could follow.

Where have we been? Where are we going? Have wars ever accomplished anything? This question can certainly be debated. As one looks at history, he can certainly see wars caused by wars before him.

Can the vicious cycle ever be broken? Are we ever to find a world in which people can break away from greed and selfishness? Will there ever be a day when we can see our own shortcomings and accept those of others?

It is time that we recognize how petty humanity is and attempt to remedy the situation. It is our responsibility to halt the march toward destruction and change our attitudes and values. We should be citizens of the world, working for the common good of all.

We, the adults of tomorrow, can make the foundations of a road to real peace, and some day when the road is completed and leads directly to a promised land of peace, our posterity may glance upward and see a dove drifting above them with an olive branch in its beak. Then, perhaps, in the wind we will hear a murmured prayer of thanks, and know we started a job that on completion was well done.

----------Darla Scoles.

Students Organize Time For More Efficient Work

HAS ANYONE EVER wondered at the close of a day where the hours of that day slipped? Although one lives and experiences every hour of each day, he may look back and wonder what he accomplished. The hours may have passed by without complete utilization.

All the plans made for that day may have passed unfulfilled, and one will never be able to bring back those wasted hours. They are gone and completely unattainable for any further use.

With graduation for seniors and the end of a school year for underclassmen close at hand, it is even more important for everyone to make the most of the time that is left to bring up the final grades for this school year.

Best way for anyone to do this is to learn to organize one's time for doing homework with consideration allowed for the extra-curricular activities of that day.

Organizing time is extremely difficult for many people. They wait to perform the difficult tasks until the last minute, usually meeting the required deadlines in haste and in a haphazard manner.

Last minute preparation is more difficult, worrisome and frequently inefficient.

Examinations in various classes are sometimes prepared at the last minute. Class reports barely meet the deadline as they are prepared hurriedly the night before -- with such a delay, one often panics, and the quality of any project is depreciated and ends with a low grade.

If during the week days, life becomes more hectic than planned and assignments pile up with more to do than time will allow, use the extra time on week ends and holidays to push the crisis away and make the days more sunny and bright.

At today's fast moving pace, a person has more tasks to do than there are hours in the day, and it is imperative that everyone organize his daily schedule and lead a richer life with more time for relaxation.------Cheryl Hurley.

Seven Juniors Attend Girls State

SEVEN OUTSTANDING JUNIOR GIRLS chosen for the 26th annual Girls State are (standing) Sheila Topp and Lynne Tenkhoff, (seated) Randy Wolferding, Diane Taylor, Mary Jane Cope, and Linda Estes. Marjean Brown was not present when the picture was snapped.

Local Groups Will Sponsor Select Girls

Seven junior girls have been selected to represent Sikeston high school in the 26th annual session of Missouri Girls State on the campus of Stephens College June 18-24.

Girls chosen were Marjean Brown, Mary Jane Cope, Linda Estes, Diane Taylor, Lynne Tenkhoff, Sheila Topp, and Randy Wolferding.

Girls State is for the purpose of educating the country's youth in the duties, privileges, rights, and responsibilities of American citizenship.

Girls will attend classes, assemblies, and briefings concerning city, state, and county government.

Six hundred and twelve girls will attend this year's sessions. Two girls will be selected from the citizens of Girls State for outstanding all around citizenship to attend Girls Nation in Washington, D.C.

Other highlights of the week will be the divisional elections with the inauguration of the state officials on Thursday evening.

Girls State is sponsored by the American Legion Auxiliary and various civic groups in town. Mrs. Carl Elam is the local director for Girls State.

Bob Crawford Is Speaker During DE-COE Banquet

STEVE STEWART presents BOB CRAWFORD a pen and pencil set.

Bob Crawford, executive vice-prsident of the Missouri Retailers' Association of Jefferson City, spoke on subject, "Sikeston 2,000 A.D.," for the annual distributive education and cooperative occupational education classes joint banquet Thursday evening.

* * *

STEVE STEWART

Senior Steve Stewart was the master of ceremonies for the evening, and Ted Wagoner offered the invocation.

Introduction of the school board and business representatives was made by Bill Bye.

Banquet was held at the Holiday Inn and was in honor of the employers.

Each employer was presented a certificate of appreciation for his cooperation with the program.

In the program students attend school part of the day and work the second half of the day.

Distributive education students and the cooperative occupational education students presented Mr. Crawford with a pen and pencil set.

Norman Woods is the sponsor of both classes.

Sidwell, Wiss Will Compete For School's Top Leader

Students campaigning for the office of student body president in Sikeston high school for next school year are King Sidwell and Gary Wiss.

Juniors seeking the office of the vice-president are Eddie Felker, Mike Musick, and Ken Woodward.

Election for the student body leaders is scheduled for next Thursday in the cafetorium.

Polls will open at the beginning of the first lunch shift and close at the end of the third shift.

Danny Cannon Is Active In Varied SHS Activities

by Bill Marsh

Senior Danny Cannon has been an athletic manager in the Sikeston public schools for the past five years. He has been head manager for the track squad for the past three years, and he served the football team the last two years.

Danny recently received the highest scout honor, the Eagle Award, from General Lewis B. Hershey at the Southeast Missouri State College in Cape Girardeau.

Danny is vice-president of Explorer Post 43 and secretary of his Order of the Arrow chapter in Southeast Missouri.

Danny has contributed a major role in the construction of the manual work for many of the school functions in Sikeston high school.

He has been active in the drama productions in school--many of these took place "back of the stage."

Danny was awarded the Tom Chidester award for drama work last year. This is an annual honor given to an outstanding drama student each year by the Little Theatre group in Sikeston.

Danny hopes to attend Murray State University next year, and he plans to join the Air Force for a career after his college work.

Students Aid In Producing 'South Pacific'

Several students have joined with teachers and student teachers to work toward the success of the Sikeston Little Theatre production of "South Pacific" to be presented tonight in the middle school auditorium at 8 o'clock.

Doug Morrison, student teacher under Robert Walker, displays various dramatic, singing and dancing abilities in one of the male leads in the play.

Jerry Smithers, student teacher for Mrs. Catherine Matthews, joins students Bill Lashmet, John Hough, Danny Cannon, and John Tidwell in a song and dance chorus.

Greer Huff plays one of the female nurses on the "South Pacific" isle. Sheila Topp appears as assistant to the native woman, Bloody Mary.

Miss Jean Love, art instructor, Ernest Elledge and Harley Barnes, principals of the middle school, and W. W. Wilkison, coordinator of math and science in the Sikeston public schools, work behind the scenes to add to the success of the play.

Working on make up are students Pat McMullin and Darla Scoles.

Various people are working on properties for the play. A few of the students are Paul Elledge, Jim Doggett, Sheila Topp, Mark Foster, Pam Marsh, Nancy Hazel, Janie Rhodes, Danny Cannon, and John Hough.

Barker staffers wish the members of the cast and crew of "South Pacific" great success on the opening night!

Future Teachers Are To Conduct Various Classes

Nine Future Teachers of America members will be practice teaching in the Sikeston elementary, middle, and high schools on Wednesday and Thursday, May 3 and 4.

Girls will teach morning sessions with the aid of a supervising teacher.

Charlotte Jones will teach first grade at Airport; Belinda Ayers has charge of Mrs. Ted York's classes at Southwest; Mickie Gosnell will work with Mrs. Don Grant's second grade at Matthews.

Suzann Moore will assist Mrs. Robert Choate at Airport; Jeannette Meredith will teach first grade at Southwest with Mrs. Evelyn Barnett.

At the middle school Vicki Schindler will be in charge of Miss Georgia Houchins' English classes. Pat Gates will instruct physical education classes with Mrs. Vanita Kirk.

At the high school Mary Ann Bruce will teach Mrs. Lawrance Aeschlimann's French I classes, and Pam Tidwell will assist Mrs. Hemba Young in her home economic classes.

Purpose of these assignments is to give students who have teaching in mind as a career for the future actual classroom experience.

Officers of the FTA are Mary Ann Bruce, president; Pat Gates, vice-president; Liz Martin, secretary-treasuruer. Miss Lucile Mount is sponsor of the group.

Saving Time Starts Soon

Daylight saving time will start at 2 a.m. Sunday, April 30, in the state of Missouri.

Clocks will be set ahead one hour and remain in that way until the last Sunday in October, when they will be set back one hour to Central Standard Time.

Students should remember to set their clocks ahead Sunday so they will not be late for school Monday morning, May 1.

Sikeston Band To Entertain Rotary Club

Keith Collins Assists North Central Assoc. As Music Chairman

Late division Sikeston high school concert band, directed by Keith Collins, will play at the Rotary banquet for the District Convention in the high school gymnasium tonight at 7:30.

Annual district 609 conference of Rotary international is now in session with 500 Rotary members meeting in Sikeston.

Musical selections to be presented include "His Honor" march, "Au Pays Lorrain," "Tijuana Brass," "Richard Rodgers," "Parade," and "America the Beautiful."

Next Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday Mr. Collins will be a member of the evaluation team of the North Central Association. As chairman of the music committee he will review the music department of Chester, Illinois' high school.

Late division band recently received a I-Superior rating at the Southeast Missouri district contest at Cape. The band also received a I rating in sight reading.

Jesus clothes the Beatitudes with his own life. He summarizes virtue as being love. If ever love was clothed in human flesh -- both love for God and love for man -- it was in Bethlehem. Writes James Stalker, "He never spent an hour, he never did an action, without direct reference to (his Father)." Jesus' love for man is the bright star in the revelation of human self-interest. It is the only absolute example of unrequited love. Different manifestations or aspects of his love --- such as patience and mercy -- can each be named a separate virtue, for love encompasses all his virtues.

SHS To Host Open House Mon., May 15

Sikeston high school will host its annual open house Monday evening, May 15.

Students and teachers have been preparing various notebooks and projects to be on display for the parents and friends at 6:30 that evening.

Early division band, directed by Keith Collins, will present its annual spring pop concert on the outdoor stage immediately after the closing of the open house.

Selections the band will play are "Prelude and Fugue"; "The Grasshopper's Dance"; Brigadoon."

"South Pacific";"Bells of San Miguel"; "Fields in Summer"; "Shadow of Your Smile."

"On a Clear Day"; "How the West Was Won"; and "Folk Suite."

Mary Anne Bruce will play a piano solo with band accompaniment in "The Grasshopper's Dance."

Sharon Hatley will accompany the band in "Fields in Summer."

Mod fashions, ranging from haircuts to proper dress lengths, have presented quite a problem around high school. Some teachers support the students' views on fashion -- we are impressed with the various spring apparel.

I'M TIRED

Of soap so bright it hurts my eyes,
And claims that each one takes the prize.
Why should a washer 10-feet tall
Clean dirty clothes the best of all?
"The only," "Best", "Your money back"
I want to give them all the sack.

AND

SOME modern music sounds to me
Like undistilled cacophony.

An ancient civilization once thrived some 6,000 years ago in an area that is now a desert between India and Pakistan, says The World Almanac. Usually known as the Indus Valley Civilization, the excavated cities of Mohenjo-Daro and Harappa show that these urban centers supported a population numbering in the thousands. The cities also show evidence of a complex form of government, elaborate irrigation and drainage systems, well-laid-out streets and houses of several stories.

COOL CUSTOMER

A man opened the door of his refrigerator one day and saw a rabbit reclining on the top shelf. Surprised, he nevertheless asked, "And just what do you think you're doing in my refrigerator, Rabbit?"

The rabbit said, "What does it say on the door, fwiend?"

The man looked and answered. "Why, nothing but 'Westinghouse.'"

"Well," replied the rabbit, settling himself more comfortably. "I'se westing."

Looking Back Over The Years

50 years ago

School notes. The juniors and seniors surprised Cora Matthews Thursday night with a party in honor of her birthday.

The Sikestonian, the year book which is to be put out by the senior class, has gone to press. All cuts are in the making and the staff expects to have the annual out on scheduled time. Buy a copy. Price 50 cents.

Vivian Ferrell and Carson Wilkey will represent the Sikeston High School in this year's essay contest at Cape Girardeau. Miss Ferrell's essay is a "School Marm's Bliss." Carson Wilkey chose for his subject, "America's Spirit of Independence."

The merchants of Sikeston should put on an advertising campaign in Charleston and try to get some of the trade that goes to Cairo. Last Saturday it took almost one coach to hold the Charlestonites who had been in Cairo, each one having more or less bundles on the return trip.

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Questions

Dear Ann Landers: Recently you made the statement that people who treat animals as if they were humans ought to have their heads examined. I have lived among both animals and people for a good long time and I am in favor of treating animals BETTER than people simply because they deserve it.

When I was a young woman, I had the ridiculous notion that any husband was better than none, so, like a fool, I married the first man who asked me. To my everlasting credit. I recognized my mistake early and got rid of the lying, cheating tyrant. I am presently enjoying the companionship of a cat.

Now I am a queen in my home instead of an unpaid servant. I get affection when I want it and if I wish to be left alone, I need make no apologies. My cat is far more considerate and loyal than that heel who swore before God and man to cherish me 'til death do us part.

Did you hear of the old maid who said she didn't need a husband because she had a parrot who swore, a fish who drank and a cat who stayed out all night? Well, I'm with her - CONTENT

Dear Con: Any woman who holds such a rock-bottom opinion of men should do some nice fellow a favor and stay single the rest of her life.

Dear Ann Landers: I am the tramp that "Mrs. Betrayed" wrote to complain about. Every word she said is true. Her description of me was perfect. And, I might add, her description of herself was perfect, too.

She is indeed attractive, well-groomed, well-educated, a fine hostess and she comes from a very distinguished family. I have no education to speak of and I am not beautiful. I don't know beans about entertaining company, and my family is from nowhere.

So, the question I'd like to ask "Mrs. Betrayed" is this: Why would a man who is married to such a wonderful woman spend time with a tramp like me? - DUMB BELLA

Dear Bella: Because she's there.

Dear Ann Landers: I am sick at heart as I write this letter. I read this morning where three small children suffocated to death in unused refrigerators. The fear and anxiety suffered by those little ones before they died is too horrible to contemplate. And it was so needless!

Several years ago I remember reading a letter in your column about this sort of carelessness on the part of mothers. You suggested the doors of the old ice boxes and refrigerators be removed. I'd like to improve on your advice if you will permit it.

Please tell mothers to ask the movers to place the old refrigerators with the doors toward the wall. This requires no time or energy, and the children are protected against possible tragedy.

Thank you, in advance for publishing my letter - CONCERNED GRANDMOTHER

Dear Gran: I still recommend removing the doors. But I am going to address an additional plea to furniture movers the world over - wherever you may be.

Please tack this column up in the garage, the wash room, the warehouse, wherever you think it will get the greatest exposure. The simple act of placing the old refrigerator with the doors toward the wall could save hundreds of lives.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE
By Jack Strass L.L.D.

THE CASE OF THE PASSIONATE POLICEMAN

Patrolman Charley knew he was in love because he thought almost as much of his girlfriend as he thought of himself. A big, strong and handsome policeman, he was no longer interested in all girls but just one. And, when he was in her arms, he was figuratively carried away. One night, however, he was literally carried away. Wrapped in her arms, his gun fell out of his holster inopportunely and shot him in the leg.

Refusing to accep the interruption philosophically, Charley filed for a Workman's Compensation and was turned down. "You weren't shot chasing a criminal," he was told. "You were shot while making love."

"That's got nothing to do with it," protested Charley. "A policeman, technically, is always on duty. Whether he's injured in a clinch or during a pinch, he's on duty. Therefore, I'm entitled to the award."

Charley took his claim to court.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you grant the passionate policeman a compensation award?

This is how the judge ruled: No! The judge held that to be entitled to a Workman's Compensation award, an injury must incurr during an activity connected with the employee's job or duty. In this case, concluded the judge, Charley's injury was incurred during a romantic interval which was not connected with his employment or duty.

Today In U. S. History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Friday, April 21, the 111th day of 1967. There are 254 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1898, the United States officially entered into a state of war with Spain.

On this date:

In 1836, Gen. Sam Houston and his army of Texans won an historic victory in the battle of San Jacinto.

In 1910, American author and humorist Samuel Clements, better known as Mark Twain, died.

In 1944, American bombers raided Bucharest, the Nazi-held capital of Romania.

In 1945, Tokyo ordered a shakeup of key local officials throughout Japan and Korea to help meet the threat of a possible American invasion.

In 1946, 26 Republican and Democratic governors urged Congress to balance the budget.

Ten years ago—Secretary of State John Foster Dulles told a special Japanese envoy the United States could not unilaterally abandon nuclear weapons tests.

Five years ago — President John F. Kennedy pressed a golden telegraph key in Palm Beach, Fla. to open the "Century 21" exposition in Seattle, Wash.

One year ago—Surgeons implanted an artificial heart in a human being for the first time at a Houston hospital.

"The most considerate husband I know," says Kiwanian Doug White in North Hollywood, "is the gent who remembers to oil the lawn mower for his wife every Saturday morning before he goes out to play golf."

War II, will not come about in Vietnam, the general said.

The strategy of the conflict, as Taylor defined it, has four main aspects: The ground war, the air war, the non-military activities to stabilize the government, and diplomacy.

Within the ground war there are really three wars, Taylor explained. The "big war" where sizable units fight in battalion, regiment and even division levels. This aspect is growing, but the general said this is not necessarily a bad sign. He contended that the North Vietnam will continue to suffer heavy losses.

There is also the "little war" of guerrilla attacks and raids, which is scattered throughout the 43 provinces of South Vietnam. The other aspect is the "criminal war" as it was called by former Ambassador to Vietnam Henry Cabot Lodge, Taylor said. This includes the terrorist activities aimed at civilians in the South Vietnam government.

The "air war" has increased in the past year and probably has caused more controversial debate than other aspects, Taylor said.

Bombing of targets north of the 17th parallel has increased.

Some of the reasons for the use of air power, he said, are: To allow the South Vietnamese to have a feeling that they are really striking back with force, Taylor continued.

The bombing slows the infiltration from the north, and will remind Ho Chi Minh that he is not living in a sanctuary. Little by little we'll move in and destroy it, if he doesn't change his ways, Taylor said.

The non-military activities conducted by American civilians working with different agencies in Vietnam to rehabilitate the people and form stability in the provinces is difficult to assess, Taylor said.

The war itself is difficult to assess, because what is true in some provinces doesn't apply in others, he noted.

The general said he was encouraged with the relative stability of the Ky government since his departure as ambassador in July, 1965. The government changed hands five times during his year as ambassador, following the fall of the Diem regime.

The Ky government is moving toward establishment of constitutional government with elections coming in September and considering the political background, Taylor said progress is promising.

He pointed out that the situation is complex, and one of the chief obstacles to stability is the inexperienced officials. Leadership was not fostered among the South Vietnamese during French rule, and a serious gap comparable to the Korean situation exists. Japan held down local leadership in Korea during its occupation, he stated.

On the diplomatic front thus far "we have had no success," Taylor stated.

"We are progressing on many fronts, but no honest official can make predictions as to when we will approach a termination," he said.

The ground war is going extremely well, because of the effect of American forces, Taylor said.

The casualty rates for the North Vietnamese last year were more than 100,000 and will exceed that number this year. Desertions among the enemy totaled about 20,000 last year, and this number will be exceeded this year, he continued.

The "little war" of guerrilla raids is still a serious problem and as long as it continues so will the "criminal war," Taylor said.

The effectiveness of the air war was shown during the lunar five-day truce in February. When the bombing was stopped, it was estimated that the North Vietnamese moved more materials to the south in five days than they did in the previous three months, he said.

Taylor cautioned that when, at last, "we do approach a settlement we should not let our eagerness allow us to move too fast on the military side or compromise our objectives."

The stakes in the war are world-wide, Taylor emphasized.

The stakes as defined by the late President John F. Kennedy are for the extension of freedom. It is a battle for the conquest for minds and souls, as well as for men and territory, Taylor quoted him as saying.

"This is a struggle in which we have taken sides," he concluded.

again identify St. Louis with the Mississippi River."

The area involved in the 20- to 30-year plan extends from the River Des Peres to the south to the city limits on the north. The area would be traversed by a scenic parkway drive.

One of the proposed improvements is a "megastructure," called "a city within a city," at Broadway and Chippewa. The 52-acre site would provide living and recreational facilities for 12,000.

The plan also calls for shopping centers, new residential developments, recreational facilities, and industrial and commercial complexes.

About one-third of the land involved is owned by the railroads and the city. One fifth of the area is vacant land.

"Most of this area is not available to the citizens of St. Louis because of its inaccessibility and uninviting development," the planners said.

The plan will be studied by civic, financial and development groups to determine how it can be implemented. The Commission will hold a public hearing on the proposal in September.

Dog Pack Kills 45 Zoo Animals

BALTIMORE, Md. (AP) - A pack of stray dogs roamed a five-acre section of the Children's Zoo in Baltimore early today, killing 45 animals.

The animals included 34 rabbits, three lambs, two guinea pigs, two small nubian goats, one hybrid deer, two wild tail deer, and one buck.

Arthur Watson, director of the Baltimore Zoo, said the dogs ate only one of the animals, a rabbit. The Children's Zoo, featuring tame animals that can be fed or petted by children, is part of the Baltimore Zoo, situated in Druid Hill Park in a residential area.

Hearnes called the Spainhower amendment a "death blow" to the bill. It would mean, he said, that only one toll road could be built in the next 20 to 30 years and that would not meet the need.

Through Tuesday night and early Wednesday his lieutenants worked to muster opposition to the Spainhower limitation. They were successful because Wednesday during a long and bitter House session the amendment was reconsidered and defeated.

Wednesday morning Hearnes took part in the inaugural ceremonies in Columbia for John C. Weaver, new president of the University of Missouri.

He admitted to a bad case of fidgets while he was in Columbia and the bill was being debated in Jefferson City, 30 miles away.

On his return later Wednesday he stayed close to the House chamber, in a legislator's office, to receive minute by minute reports on the arguments.

Finally, however, he had to leave to take a plane to New York where he had speaking engagements Thursday.

So the Democratic majority of the house, led by men Hearnes had approved, put the toll road proposal in deep freeze until next Tuesday.

Since his return from New York, Hearnes said, he has received some verbal explanations of what shape the bill is in but he wasn't sure just how seriously some of the changes might affect the basic bill.

Nor, he said, did he know what was contemplated in some half a dozen amendments that were being waved on the House floor when the argument was delayed Wednesday evening.

He grinned today when he said he certainly was going to be close by while the bill is being debated further next Tuesday.

Combine Faiths

India's Sikhs practice a faith that combines both Hindu and Moslem beliefs. Like followers of Islam, they worship only one god and oppose caste barriers; like Hindus, they eat no beef and cremate their dead.

ON CAPE COD we patronized a local market with delivery service. When our order arrived, for the fourth time with the eggs at the very bottom of the groceries and at least six broken, I thought it was time to complain. "In the future," I told the clerk, "please put the eggs on top." "Ma'am," he replied in his Down East accent, "we put them eggs on the bottom purposely, so when they break they won't run all over the rest of your groceries."

George L. Hale Jr. Cited Man of Year

Master of ceremonies David Blanton presented the plaque.

Hale is active in the First Methodist church. He is past president and member of the Chamber of Commerce board and a past president of the Junior Chamber of Commerce. He is an active member of the Lions club and has served as a member of the Community Chest board and its chairman.

He is a member of the citizens advisory committee to the board of education and is a past chairman.

Hale was active in the formation and operation of the Sikeston Little League baseball, the Babe Ruth and Connie Mack leagues.

He has held every district office in Boy Scouting, and is a member of the executive committee of the Southeast Missouri Council. He has received the highest Scouting honor, the Silver Beaver Award.

Hale visits ill and aged acquaintances in the hospital two or three times a week, a member of the selection committee said.

Hale and his wife, Emily, have two sons, James, who is attending the University of Missouri in Columbia, and George Hale III, a junior at Southeast Missouri State College in Cape Girardeau.

Special Cotton Picker awards were presented to the speaker, Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor and Peter Myers, chosen by the Jaycees as one of four of the nations top young farmers.

Recognition was given to Mrs. Keith Collins, Sikeston's Woman of the year, and Mrs. Donald Grant, outstanding young teacher.

Clinton introduced new and old members of the board of directors. Retiring members are, W. S. McMullin, Phil Barkett and Bruce Lewis. Each received a certificate of appreciation. Present members are James Beaird, Lee Austin Bowman, Charles Stamp, Fielding Potashnick, Charles Blanton III, Jack Hogan, Sam Harbin, Sherman Grant, Mrs. Jolene Walker, Don Bohannon, Clinton and Huff.

The meeting opened with singing of the national anthem led by Richard Pinkerton, manager of the Chamber of Commerce. The invocation was given by the Rt. Rev. Msgr. Walter McGrane, pastor of St. Francis Xavier Catholic church.

The audience was entertained with numbers from the Little Theater play of South Pacific, to be given at the junior high school tonight and Saturday night. Cast members, who participated, under the direction of Mrs. Hope Terrell were, James Moore, Mrs. Pat Mitchell, Vivian Boyer, Douglas Morrison and Dan Norton.

Huff said of the Chamber program:

"We will place heavy emphasis on new industrial plants during the coming year, as long as we don't have to sell our souls to secure them. I can assure that not a single committee appointee is an honorary member, but everyone dedicated to do his job.

"We are on our way to expand our trade territory, and will continue to keep good relations with our area farmers, and our schools. We will also endeavor to expand our aviation facilities and emphasize the importance of aviation to the future of our community."

Organ music was presented by Miss Kathryn Clark.

Monsignor McGrane gave the benediction.

GEN. MAXWELL D. TAYLOR looks at his cotton picker award certificate, glasses in hand, at the Chamber of Commerce banquet last night in the armory. David Blanton, master of ceremonies, presented it to Taylor, who talked about the war in Vietnam.

Taylor Urges Patient Pursuit of Viet War

Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor speaking at the Chamber of Commerce Man of the Year banquet at the Armory Thursday night brought the Vietnam conflict into perspective.

The general organized his speech around three aspects of the U. S. involvement: The objective, strategy and progress of the conflict.

"I have no sympathy with congressmen who say, 'What are we trying to do?'" he said.

Taylor said the objective in Vietnam has not changed. It has been stated in different language by the Presidents Eisenhower, Kennedy and Johnson, but the meaning is the same.

The objective is to obtain the independence of the South Vietnamese people so they will be allowed to guide their country in their own way, General Taylor said.

It is my opinion that an unconditional surrender, such as was executed on the battleship Missouri following World

Hanoi Broadcast Rejects Neutral Zone Pullback

TOKYO (AP) - North Vietnam rejected today a new U.S. proposal to establish a 26-mile demilitarized zone between the two Vietnams, Hanoi's official Vietnam News Agency reported.

North Vietnam called the American proposal "a trick aimed at camouflaging the U.S. war escalation" and described it as a "violation of the 1954 Geneva agreements on Vietnam and the statute of the demilitarized zone."

The news agency also asserted the plan was aimed at "setting up a vast no man's land perpetually partitioning Vietnam."

The U.S. proposal called for withdrawal of American and South Vietnamese troops 10 miles south of the demilitarized zone if North Vietnam pulls its forces 10 miles north of the six-mile-wide zone.

The U.S. proposal was based upon a plan announced early this week by Canada's Foreign Minister Paul Martin. It was endorsed by the South Vietnamese government Tuesday.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk made the offer at a meeting of the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization's Council of Ministers in Washington Wednesday.

The State Department said that with the separation of forces "the United States would be ready to undertake talks leading to further de-escalation and an over-all settlement."

Under the plan, all U.S. and Vietnamese forces would withdraw 10 miles south of the demilitarized zone if North Vietnam would pull its forces 10 miles north of the zone.

This would establish a 26-mile-wide belt of land from the South China Sea to the Laotian border - a distance of about 45 miles - in which there would have been no military activity.

An International Control Commission was to have inspected the area to observe that both sides kept the bargain.

The demilitarized zone was established by the 1954 Geneva conference which divided Vietnam. The International Control Commission was set up to watch over the Vietnamese truce. The members are Canada, Poland and India.

New Policeman Joins Force

City Manager W. Raymert Miller announced the appointment of Larry G. Browning, 21, 115 North Frisco, as a patrolman with the police department.

The appointment is effective Saturday. He is a graduate of Sikeston High School and was employed as a dispatcher with Jolly Cab Co., 105 North Kingshighway. He is not married.

Browning is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Browning. The appointment brings the department to 16 men.

Browning will fill a slot vacated by Kenneth West.

Pay Raise Ends Carson Holdout

NEW YORK (AP)- Johnny Carson will be back on the "Tonight" television show Monday.

Carson says he will return with "new enthusiasm" after his lawyers and the National Broadcasting Co. announced Thursday that the star and the network had settled their differences.

The comedian, whose weekly salary had been on the order of $15,000, will receive a "substantial increase." The amount was not revealed.

Carson left the show during the AFTRA strike against the networks, charging that NBC had breached his contract in showing taped reruns of his performances.

Carson said later that money was only "partly" the issue in the dispute. He was reported to have won concessions on personal appearances and the possibility of doing specials for the network.

David E. Shell, 410 Short St., was charged by police Thursday with speeding on Murray Lane.

Toll Road Program Concerns Hearnes

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Gov. Warren E. Hearnes expressed concern today over the future of one of his legislative proposals - one very close to his heart.

It is the embattled bill to create a toll road authority with power to build and operate toll roads providing quick transportation in areas not now served by adequate state or federal highways.

They would serve areas holding a potential of increased communications need and of boosted economic prospects such as the recreation areas and the mineral resources of the Missouri Ozark region.

Hearnes' great concern, he told his press conference, was that no amendment be added which would change the principle of the bill. He said the proposal had been gone over by experts in the toll road business and in investment banking. They liked it, he said.

Tuesday, the Missouri House adopted an amendment by Rep. James I. Spainhower, D-Marshall, that would have limited the authority's call on state highway funds to 3 per cent of the annual revenues on such things as gasoline taxes, auto-

Claud Smith Outlines Duties of Rotarians

The opening business session of the district Rotary convention was held at the Hunter Memorial First Presbyterian church on Wakefield and Allen Blvd. with a welcome by President Thatcher Scism, and greetings from District Governor Lee G. Cochran, Jackson.

The principal speaker was Claud D. Smith, Junction City, Colo., personal representative of Richard Evans, president Rotary International, Sale Lake City, Utah.

He lauded the number one Rotarian, as the oldest continuous speaker of the spoken word over CBS radio. He has developed a program entitled, "a better world through Rotary, with service above self.

He outlined 10 things for every Rotarian: "share Rotary by adding a new member, share fellowship by adding a new club; enjoy the fellowship; discover and serve the needs of your community; make your business and profession better; serve youth; pursue effective public relations; emphasize inter-nationality of Rotary; engage in world community service, and contribute to Rotary foundation."

This would establish a 26-mile-wide belt of land from the South China Sea to the Laotian border - a distance of about 45 miles - in which there would have been no military activity.

An International Control Commission was to have inspected the area to observe that both sides kept the bargain.

The demilitarized zone was established by the 1954 Geneva conference which divided Vietnam. The International Control Commission was set up to watch over the Vietnamese truce. The members are Canada, Poland and India.

New Policeman Joins Force

City Manager W. Raymert Miller announced the appointment of Larry G. Browning, 21, 115 North Frisco, as a patrolman with the police department.

The appointment is effective Saturday. He is a graduate of Sikeston High School and was employed as a dispatcher with Jolly Cab Co., 105 North Kingshighway. He is not married.

Browning is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Browning. The appointment brings the department to 16 men.

Browning will fill a slot vacated by Kenneth West.

Riverfront Plan Eyed

ST. LOUIS (AP)—A blueprint for transforming the St. Louis riverfront into a dreamland of beauty and utility is in the hands of the City Plan Commission today.

The Commission's planning staff submitted the plan Thursday.

The plan envisions parks, playgrounds, a floating concert hall, floating shops and restaurants and marinas along 19 miles of riverfront now either vacant or dilapidated.

"A new cycle has begun," the planners said, that "must

Watching TV Can Be Hazardous

Five persons were admitted to the emergency room of the Missouri Delta Community hospital Thursday:

Pay Raise Ends Carson Holdout

NEW YORK (AP)- Johnny Carson will be back on the "Tonight" television show Monday.

Carson says he will return with "new enthusiasm" after his lawyers and the National Broadcasting Co. announced Thursday that the star and the network had settled their differences.

The comedian, whose weekly salary had been on the order of $15,000, will receive a "substantial increase." The amount was not revealed.

Carson left the show during the AFTRA strike against the networks, charging that NBC had breached his contract in showing taped reruns of his performances.

Carson said later that money was only "partly" the issue in the dispute. He was reported to have won concessions on personal appearances and the possibility of doing specials for the network.

Breakin Attempted

An attempted breakin was reported to police today at Barks & O'Neal Equipment Co., 112 West Trotter.

Steel bars on a window in the building were cut, but entry was not gained, Dayton Lasater, parts manager, said.

In other police activity, Kenny Jones, 204 Alabama, was arrested early today at 227 Fuchs and charged Thursday with breaking and entering and destruction of private property, police reported.

James H. Brewer, route two, Sikeston, was charged Thursday with careless and imprudent driving for running a stop sign on West Malone, police said.

David E. Shell, 410 Short St., was charged by police Thursday with speeding on Murray Lane.

Toll Road Program Concerns Hearnes

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Gov. Warren E. Hearnes expressed concern today over the future of one of his legislative proposals - one very close to his heart.

It is the embattled bill to create a toll road authority with power to build and operate toll roads providing quick transportation in areas not now served by adequate state or federal highways.

They would serve areas holding a potential of increased communications need and of boosted economic prospects such as the recreation areas and the mineral resources of the Missouri Ozark region.

Hearnes' great concern, he told his press conference, was that no amendment be added which would change the principle of the bill. He said the proposal had been gone over by experts in the toll road business and in investment banking. They liked it, he said.

Tuesday, the Missouri House adopted an amendment by Rep. James I. Spainhower, D-Marshall, that would have limited the authority's call on state highway funds to 3 per cent of the annual revenues on such things as gasoline taxes, auto-

Claud Smith Outlines Duties of Rotarians

The opening business session of the district Rotary convention was held at the Hunter Memorial First Presbyterian church on Wakefield and Allen Blvd. with a welcome by President Thatcher Scism, and greetings from District Governor Lee G. Cochran, Jackson.

The principal speaker was Claud D. Smith, Junction City, Colo., personal representative of Richard Evans, president Rotary International, Sale Lake City, Utah.

He lauded the number one Rotarian, as the oldest continuous speaker of the spoken word over CBS radio. He has developed a program entitled, "a better world through Rotary, with service above self.

He outlined 10 things for every Rotarian: "share Rotary by adding a new member, share fellowship by adding a new club; enjoy the fellowship; discover and serve the needs of your community; make your business and profession better; serve youth; pursue effective public relations; emphasize inter-nationality of Rotary; engage in world community service, and contribute to Rotary foundation."

Smith said, "the foundation program is an international fellowship program whereby 150 students can exchange colleges or universities without expense, but must have a bachelor degree. He cannot be a

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!
LEST WE FORGET -

In the depression years when money was scarce and a dollar was worth a dollar, the City of Sikeston, needed some money to help secure a National Guard Armory to house Co. K and to keep Co. K in Sikeston, as other towns in Southeast Missouri were seeking Co. K. Major Harry E. Dudley had been appointed by Adjutant General Means to represent Missouri at a meeting of several mid-west state representatives in the new State Capitol building in Lincoln, Nebraska. Major Dudley was flown in a National Guard plane to Lincoln for the meeting. After attending the meeting, Dudley returned to the National Guard Camp at Nevada, Missouri. After making his report to General Means, he was ordered to fly to Jefferson City to confer with Mr. Matt Murray who was State Director of the Works Progress Administration. Dudley accompanied by Capt. John Christy, (who was Speaker of the House and who is now Col. Christy and Mayor of Jefferson City), flew to Jefferson City, for this conference. Mr. Murray was very sympathetic with their request but said that Federal Regulations required the sponsors of a project to furnish the site and to put up money to purchase the materials necessary to construct an Armory. Mr. Murray advised Major Dudley that after making his report to General Means and upon his return to Sikeston, to discuss this subject of money and materials with Charles L. Blanton, Jr., then Assistant W.P.A. supervisor for SEMO. This was done immediately and Blanton suggested that Dudley contact the City Council for a site on which to construct the proposed Armory. This was done and the City Council donated a part of the City Park on Main Street to the State to be used as a site for the Armory. Now came the big problem, where was the sponsor going to get the necessary money? The State of Missouri agreed on a certain amount as its part. The City of Sikeston had no funds available. The Board of Public Works was contacted and after a meeting in the old City Hall, realized that Sikeston, might lose Co. K with a fairly good payroll unless something was done, Mr. J. F. Cox, Chairman of the Board agreed and then in 1938 the municipal Electric Fund gave $1375.00 to be able to get the program started and then in the next year gave $15,375.00. A total of $16,750 was invested in the Armory. Mr. Blanton put C. M. Taylor (one of the finest brick masons in the Country) in charge of construction and work started. Suddenly we discovered that the State-approved architects had planned for the ceiling to only be 16 feet from the floor - 16 ft. steel beams had been placed on order and were to be shipped by manufacturer very soon. Dudley who loved athletics suddenly woke up to the fact that Co. K's basketball team would be unable to perform satisfactorily with only a 16 foot ceiling so he and Capt. T. C. Dye (now Lt. Col. Dye) rushed to Jefferson City at their own expense to contact Adjutant General Means to see if steel beams at least 18 ft. high could not be purchased by the State instead of the 16 ft. ones. General Means called the steel manufacturer and it was agreed to do so.

As a result of the generosity of the State of Missouri, the City of Sikeston, and particularly the Board of Public Works, who furnished the Sikeston's share of money and the W.P.A., Co. K stayed in Sikeston, in its own Armory and the building has been used more or less as a community building since 1938. It also has been used for all high school basketball games for the last 20 years, saving the taxpayers thousands of dollars until a gymnasium can be constructed.

This is another dividend the citizens of Sikeston received from the Municipal Light Plant and one more reason to vote YES for the bonds to buy the Missouri Utilities Company property in Sikeston.

YOUTHFUL VIRTUES

Temperance - in the broad sense of the word - is a virtue more easily acquired in middle or old age than in youth. When the flesh grows weaker than the spirit, moderation and self-control come naturally. Young people, on the other hand, are not supposed to be temperate; they are expected to be full of "the fiery vehemence of youth," as Sir Walter Scott put it, and possess "the will to do, the soul to dare."

President Johnson takes a slightly different view. He has proclaimed a Youth Temperance Education Week beginning Sunday, April 23. Nowadays, the President said in his proclamation, "false sophistication" makes some people refrain from advocating "the simple virtues of character that are the mainstays of any great nation-duty, sacrifice, fidelity, sound minds in healthy bodies, sanctity of the home, purity of ideals and love of country."

Such simple virtues seem out of favor among the mass of high school and college-age youth who consider themselves "alienated." Resentful of authority, these young people have turned against the "establishment" and the "power structure" and elected to drop out of "the rat race." Kenneth Keniston of the Yale Medical School's department of psychiatry has written that alienation today "characteristically takes the new form of rebellion without a program, of refusal of what is, without a vision of what should be."

Opinions differ, but alienated youth may have a point. After attending a Human Be-In at San Francisco's Golden Gate Park, Kenneth Lamott wrote in the Los Angeles Times (March 26, 1967) that "Going barefoot and wearing your hair long and trying earnestly to be spontaneous and honest and not harming anybody else and taking no thought for the morrow and blowing soap bubbles and dancing to bands with names like the Grateful Dead and the Quicksilver Messenger Service is not necessarily a contemptible way of life. It may, perhaps, even be preferable to being a young executive on the way up with too much alcohol in your life, a mortgage you can't afford, a boss who demands unceasing admiration, and a third baby and first divorce on their respective ways."

NEW YORK (AP) -- Some sons feel it is a handicap to have a famous father.

Not actor Sydney Chaplin, son of Charles Chaplin.

"I think anyone who feels his life has been scarred because of the fame of his father is a bore." he said.

Sydney recently completed a role in "The Countess From Hong Kong," which was produced and directed by Charles Chaplin. It was his second appearance in a production by his father. In 1952 he played a young composer in "Limelight."

The younger Chaplin is proud of his father's historic stature in the film world.

"My father invented the big salaries in this business," he remarked. "He was the first man to ask and get a million dollars a year. He was always a good businessman."

Life with father in Hollywood wasn't too congenial for Sydney as a lad, however, because of his own harum scarum ways.

"Because he had to quit school after the first grade to support his mother, my father always had a great respect for education," he said.

"But I was pretty wild. I had been thrown out of three schools by the time I was 16.

"Dad was terribly disappointed in me at that time. He tried to be strict. He told me, 'You have to be something in life. You must do something to earn a living.

"But how can you tell a kid that he needs to go to work when he lives in a house with 12 servants?

"You know how some kids earn money by setting up a lemonade stand in their front yard? Well, I tried that gimmick, too, but instead of lemonade I sold scotch. Why not? It was there, and easier to do. And at 15 I was getting only $1 a week as an allowance."

A tour of duty during the war, Sydney said, brought an end to his playboy ways and a realization that it was time for him to seek a career of his own.

He helped organize a theater in Hollywood and discovered that father wasn't the only actor in the family. Since then Sydney has appeared in half a dozen films and a notable series of Broadway musicals, including "The Bells Are Ringing," with Judy Holliday and "Funny Girl" with Barbra Streisand.

Sydney maintains homes here and in Paris, where until recently he also owned a restaurant called the Chez Moustache.

Six feet one and powerfully built, Sydney bears little physical resemblance to his father.

Reuther Disturbed By LBJ's Coolness -- Seeks White House Backing For Big Wage Hike Offensive

Detroit: -- For Walter Reuther it is all high noon, now. It's showdown time. And he's playing it as a loner. He confides virtually in no one over at big Solidarity House. He takes virtually no telephone calls from other national labor chiefs. He whirls in and out of their home cities without contacting old friends with whom he once marched shoulder to shoulder.

The mere change of Article Two, Sec. Six of the auto union constitution makes it possible for his massive organization to bolt the AFL-CIO.

But being a loner leaves him unprotected in his triennial offensive against the Big Three auto companies.

He may be so alone this time -- despite the cheering thousands of delegates to his special convention -- that Lyndon Johnson, once his old and good friend, may decide not to ride shotgun for him this fall as he did in '64.

This disturbs the red-haired auto union leader. For it is axiomatic in such tense and tough collective bargaining as must ensue this troubled economic year, that without White House support labor has strong leverage in a mass industry.

And this is a troubled year. Auto industry earnings are down. Layoffs are up. So is the pressure from 200,000 skilled auto workers -- out of 600,000 in the vast network of plants. As on the airlines and railroads and in rubber and even in radio and television, the skilled men and women want premium pay -- well above the big cash increase Reuther must win for his people to keep his union from being ripped by civil war.

There are those insiders who say that the guaranteed annual income -- pay by the year -- for hourly rated employes secretly has been won by Reuther from one of the companies.

The problem is cash. So the problem is getting President Johnson's support. This is just not developing in the White House. True, Mr. Johnson had Reuther over to the LBJ ranch not too long ago.

But there also was the day the redhead went to the White House. That was Feb. 20.

Reuther had a UAW plaque with him for presentation to Mr. Johnson. After testifying on the Hill, the Detroiter drove down to the White House. He had been told to go to a side gate. There was no press. Just trouble-shooter Joe Califano. They went to see the President. There was a long, informal chat wrapped around the brief plaque - presentation formalities. But if there were pictures made, few have seen them. Reuther left as quietly and unnoticed as he came.

No doubt they discussed the coming battle in the automobile industry which may break into one of the longest strikes since 1946. No doubt, too, they discussed Reuther's searing attacks on the rest of the labor movement. They were eyeball to eyeball, but did not see alike.

To Reuther, George Meany may be a "plumber with a banker's mentality." To Lyndon Johnson, Meany is a shrewd and powerful leader of some 14 million unionists. And Meany is his close friend. The President knows that many times what has appeared to be a lack of Meany militancy was just Meany's behind - the - scenes efforts to avert costly crippling strikes.

So there were no stirring joint statements that day nor pictures either with the man who has vowed to drive Meany from the labor movement's leadership.

There also is the problem of Bob Kennedy. There are those in the White House and State Dept. who make certain to tell the President of the strong support many UAW leaders give Bob Kennedy's stop-the-bombing speeches. Virtually all the top UAW powers have been praising Kennedy in speeches before big crowds. This hurts the President where it hurts most - in the labor movement which has steadfastly been his most solid phalanx on foreign affairs policy.

So Reuther goes it alone. He sears the other labor chiefs -- and then calls on them to form a "comprehensive cooperative coordinated organizing crusade." In some instances -- such as the teachers whom he has given $1,-075,000 -- he backs his outcries with cash. Elsewhere he calls for a $30 million drive to unionize the working poor on farms and in slums.

Again he demands a new drive among white collar people and technicians so the labor movement can boast of a total of 35 million members.

But he's a loner. The labor leaders ignore his bitter attacks. Reuther and his crusade is not even on the agenda for the May 8 AFL-CIO Executive Council meeting.

There, the rest of labor's high command will be talking about cooperating with President Johnson.

Walter Reuther, amidst all his followers, appears alone, indeed. He may well have to test the strategy of solitude.

word - of - mouth advertising started an epidemic of conscience trouble, and the next few months brought the Treasury fund $250. The total take now is approaching the $4 - million-a-year-mark!

The average price of a clear conscience seems to be $5 or $10. The most frequent offenses are the second use of postage stamps, pilfering government supplies, and the evasion of income taxes. Most of the offenses are against the government, but Uncle Sam obligingly accepts restitution for private misdeeds, too. Usually this happens when the rightful owner of the money cannot be found.

Uncle Sam has a conscience, too. Many citizens are annoyed by the government's picayune demands for listing large sums down to the last penny. They pay in full dollars only, and the government, having a conscience, must do something with the extra cents. The you-keep-the change contributions go into the Conscience Fund.

An important film producer was of a very conservative nature. He called in a bust-and-lust writer who was currently doing a screenplay for one of his numerous pictures, and advised the author that while the script was excellent, in his opinion, a certain four - letter word of very Anglo-Saxon origin would have to be deleted before he could accept or shoot the screenplay. The writer made no objection and both men left arm-in-arm for lunch at the Brown Derby.

They were barely seated in the noted restaurant when the conservative producer paled and pushed back his chair explaining that he had to rush right back to the office.

"Is there anything wrong?" questioned the author.

"Er-no," stuttered the producer, embarrassedly. "But I wrote that word on my desk-pad and I'm afraid my young secretary will see it unless I go back and tear it off the top sheet."

"Good grief, man," said the writer.

Many salesmen are taught to avoid the phrase 'the price is only so much.'

Offhand you might think the remark would flatter the customer. It implies that he is used to dealing in big sums and that the matter of a few pennies is of concern only to his house-keeper or gardener, not to himself.

But the wary customer grows nervous.

For a quarter you can buy a weekly magazine of over 200 pages.

For only a nickel customers will abandon one grocery store and buy their bread from another store.

For only a small saving, people will buy out-of-season and carry food from summertime till cold weather. Other people will trudge all over town to save only a dime here and a dollar there.

The way to appeal to a customer's pocketbook is to take sides with him, rather than against him. Appreciate that he has many outlets for his money and that he is anxious to make his money reach all the way around. Help him see the advantages to him of buying your product. Talk profits.

But don't let yourself think of any sum of money as unimportant.

NEW PROPOSAL TO CHECK THE SUPREME COURT

The constant abuse of power by the United States Supreme Court is becoming almost intolerable to thinking Americans. The Court is relentlessly striking down, one after another, all of the safeguards a free people have established, under law, to preserve their freedom and protect the rights of the innocent. Known, confessed and convicted criminals have been let loose by the Court to rob and kill again. School authorities have been denied the authority to discharge known communists from teaching positions.

Our Constitution is a structure of checks and balances. But one necessary check was omitted from it, because the founders never imagined that judges of the highest court in the land would usurp the power to make law. As a result, there in now no Constitutional restraint on the authority and decisions of Supreme Court Judges. As conditions now stand, a bare one-man majority of the Supreme Court can overturn any law and issue decrees binding on any Legislative or Executive body, with no recourse remaining even where the will of the people has been clearly expressed.

A Constitutional Amendment has been introduced in the House of Representatives which would permit a two-thirds majority of both houses of Congress, to over-ride any decision by the Supreme Court, just as a two-thirds majority of both Houses can now over-ride a Presidential veto. This proposal deserves very careful examination. Whether or not it is the best way to curb and check the Supreme Court, it is clear that some way must soon be found. A free people cannot be ruled by five judges appointed for life. HLH

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- The navy is trying to suppress the fantastic story of a real - life Caine Mutiny, closely following the plot of the celebrated Herman Wouk Novel. This one happened not in World War II but aboard a radar picket destroyer on combat duty off Vietnam.

The junior officers even kept a "captain's madness log," as in the "Caine Mutiny," to use as evidence against their commanding officer. He is Lt. Cmdr. Marcus Aurelius Arnheiter and the "Mutiny" took place aboard the U.S.S. Vance.

The investigative report shows clearly, however, that Arnheiter was no Captain Queeg.

Here is the story the navy is trying to keep quiet:

A group of young officers had been operating the U.S.S. Vance more like a yacht than a warship until Arnheiter took command a few days before Christmas, 1965. At sea, they enjoyed a leisurely life, including movies every afternoon. At anchor, they went joy riding and water skiing in an outboard motorboat they had acquired ashore.

Discipline aboard the Vance was so relaxed that an enlisted crewman complained to his congressman: "No one knows or cares what you are doing. You get no recognition for keeping your gear up. In fact, no one knows whether it is working or not. The officers don't check us; they don't look at our logs. They don't inspect our gear or our spaces."

This letter got back to Rear Adm. Walter H. Baumberger, then commander of the cruiser destroyer force in the Pacific, who cited it in a notice to all his ships. Without mentioning names, he wrote: "The attached letter was recently received via a congressman... (it) points up the misuse of a specific individual and states quite eloquently the frustrations experienced by a number of our young bluejackets. It is my fervent hope that such a situation does not now exist in any of our ships."

SKIPPER CRACKS DOWN

To restore combat efficiency aboard the Vance, Arnheiter began cracking down. This spoiled the fun of his junior officers, who chafed under the new discipline.

Shortly after Arnheiter become Skipper, the ship was ordered to the war zone. Her mission was to patrol the Coast, intercept the smuggling of Communist contraband and bombard enemy targets on shore.

He mounted a .30 - caliber machinegun on the outboard runabout, trained the ship's crew in the use of the big three - inch guns and taught them how to use rifles in case they should have to repel boarders. Then he began patrolling close to the shore, searching the coves and inlets for suspicious junks. He also requested spotter planes to point out spotter planes to the ship's big guns.

The junior officers complained that he was taking unnecessary risks and that they could patrol by radar beyond the barrier reef 20 miles out.

Soon they began to plot against Arnheiter. Once he saw in the ward room an open copy of Herman Wouk's "Caine Mutiny Court Martial," the stage version of the original novel.

Meanwhile, three subordinates -- Lt. Ray Hardy, the executive officer; Lt. (J. G.) William Generous, the operations officer; and Ensign Louis Belmonte -- were compiling a long list of petty grievances against Arnheiter, entered by Belmonte in the "captain's madness log."

RELIGIOUS SERVICES

The trouble really began when Generous, a Catholic complained in a letter to a priest, Lt. Richard Osterman, that Arnheiter was compelling all hands to attend protestant services on the ship's fantail.

"Three times now," the Lieutenant wrote, "the crew has been ordered aft... For these euphemistic church calls... I cannot accept illegality and infringement of my constitutional rights. I seek relief from this burden, but I do so anonymously, once again for the sake of my family. Is there something that you can do?"

Unknown to Arnheiter, Chaplain Osterman registered a complaint with higher authorities. Ensign Belmonte, the Lay Catholic leader on board, pressed the charges in complaints to other chaplains.

Investigation developed that the skipper, an Episcopalian, had not been holding protestant services. Invocations and benedictions were offered, but were taken from the navy's own booklet of "Prayers At Sea." He had held these services in order to instill patriotism and prepare his men spiritually for combat.

One of Generous's specific complaints was that the crew had been called on to sing all four verses of "America", and that the ference in the fourth verse to "Our Fathers' God to Thee, Author of Liberty," had protestant connocations.

When the charges eventually were investigated, it was found "that although the nature of the initial lectures did have religious overtones, the tenor of the program subsequently changed to conform with the spirit of general order 21 to which objection could not reasonably be raised."

The other charges were even more petty, including the complaint that Arnheiter had declared candy "unfit for consumption" in order to give it to hungry Vietnamese children.

Prior to these findings, however, Arnheiter was abruptly removed from his command. He was neither informed of the charges against him nor given an opportunity to reply. The admirals acted precipitously out of concern for the ship's morale in a war zone.

But having made their decision, they refused to back down -- even after investigation proved the charges to be frivolous.

Thus Arnheiter was cashiered, in effect, for bringing discipline to his ship and pressing the war too vigorously.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

LEST WE FORGET -

In the depression years when money was scarce and a dollar was worth a dollar, the City of Sikeston, needed some money to help secure a National Guard Armory to house Co. K and to keep Co. K in Sikeston, as other towns in Southeast Missouri were seeking Co. K. Major Harry E. Dudley had been appointed by Adjutant General Means to represent Missouri at a meeting of several mid-west state representatives in the new State Capitol building in Lincoln, Nebraska. Major Dudley was flown in a National Guard plane to Lincoln for the meeting. After attending the meeting, Dudley returned to the National Guard Camp at Nevada, Missouri. After making his report to General Means, he was ordered to fly to Jefferson City to confer with Mr. Matt Murray who was State Director of the Works Progress Administration. Dudley accompanied by Capt. John Christy, (who was Speaker of the House and who is now Col. Christy and Mayor of Jefferson City), flew to Jefferson City, for this conference. Mr. Murray was very sympathetic with their request but said that Federal Regulations required the sponsors of a project to furnish the site and to put up money to purchase the materials necessary to construct an Armory. Mr. Murray advised Major Dudley that after making his report to General Means and upon his return to Sikeston, to discuss this subject of money and materials with Charles L. Blanton, Jr., then Assistant W.P.A. supervisor for SEMO. This was done immediately and Blanton suggested that Dudley contact the City Council for a site on which to construct the proposed Armory. This was done and the City Council donated a part of the City Park on Main Street to the State to be used as a site for the Armory. Now came the big problem, where was the sponsor going to get the necessary money? The State of Missouri agreed on a certain amount as its part. The City of Sikeston had no funds available. The Board of Public Works was contacted and after a meeting in the old City Hall, realized that Sikeston, might lose Co. K with a fairly good payroll unless something was done, Mr. J. F. Cox, Chairman of the Board agreed and then in 1938 the municipal Electric Fund gave $1375.00 to be able to get the program started and then in the next year gave $15,375.00. A total of $16,750 was invested in the Armory. Mr. Blanton put C. M. Taylor (one of the finest brick masons in the Country) in charge of construction and work started. Suddenly we discovered that the State-approved architects had planned for the ceiling to only be 16 feet from the floor - 16 ft. steel beams had been placed on order and were to be shipped by manufacturer very soon. Dudley who loved athletics suddenly woke up to the fact that Co. K's basketball team would be unable to perform satisfactorily with only a 16 foot ceiling so he and Capt. T. C. Dye (now Lt. Col. Dye) rushed to Jefferson City at their own expense to contact Adjutant General Means to see if steel beams at least 18 ft. high could not be purchased by the State instead of the 16 ft. ones. General Means called the steel manufacturer and it was agreed to do so.

As a result of the generosity of the State of Missouri, the City of Sikeston, and particularly the Board of Public Works, who furnished the Sikeston's share of money and the W.P.A., Co. K stayed in Sikeston, in its own Armory and the building has been used more or less as a community building since 1938. It also has been used for all high school basketball games for the last 20 years, saving the taxpayers thousands of dollars until a gymnasium can be constructed.

This is another dividend the citizens of Sikeston received from the Municipal Light Plant and one more reason to vote YES for the bonds to buy the Missouri Utilities Company property in Sikeston.

"Since January 1, 1967, U.S.D.A. has purchased 112.1 million pounds of flour, 30.2 million pounds of corn meal, 4.4 million pounds of corn (hominy) grits, 6.1 million pounds of rolled wheat and 10.1 million pounds of rolled oats for U.S.D.A. domestic programs. Approximately 2.7 million bushels of wheat, 860.3 thousand bushels of corn and 766.7 thousand bushels of oats are required to process these quantities."

YOUTHFUL VIRTUES

Temperance - in the broad sense of the word - is a virtue more easily acquired in middle or old age than in youth. When the flesh grows weaker than the spirit, moderation and self-control come naturally. Young people, on the other hand, are not supposed to be temperate; they are expected to be full of "the fiery vehemence of youth," as Sir Walter Scott put it, and possess "the will to do, the soul to dare."

President Johnson takes a slightly different view. He has proclaimed a Youth Temperance Education Week beginning Sunday, April 23. Nowadays, the President said in his proclamation, "false sophistication" makes some people refrain from advocating "the simple virtues of character that are the mainstays of any great nation-duty, sacrifice, fidelity, sound minds in healthy bodies, sanctity of the home, purity of ideals and love of country."

Such simple virtues seem out of favor among the mass of high school and college-age youth who consider themselves "alienated." Resentful of authority, these young people have turned against the "establishment" and the "power structure" and elected to drop out of "the rat race." Kenneth Keniston of the Yale Medical School's department of psychiatry has written that alienation today "characteristically takes the new form of rebellion without a program, of refusal of what is, without a vision of what should be."

Opinions differ, but alienated youth may have a point. After attending a Human Be-In at San Francisco's Golden Gate Park, Kenneth Lamott wrote in the Los Angeles Times (March 26, 1967) that "Going barefoot and wearing your hair long and trying earnestly to be spontaneous and honest and not harming anybody else and taking no thought for the morrow and blowing soap bubbles and dancing to bands with names like the Grateful Dead and the Quicksilver Messenger Service is not necessarily a contemptible way of life. It may, perhaps, even be preferable to being a young executive on the way up with too much alcohol in your life, a mortgage you can't afford, a boss who demands unceasing admiration, and a third baby and first divorce on their respective ways."

NEW YORK (AP) -- Some sons feel it is a handicap to have a famous father.

Not actor Sydney Chaplin, son of Charles Chaplin.

"I think anyone who feels his life has been scarred because of the fame of his father is a bore." he said.

Sydney recently completed a role in "The Countess From Hong Kong," which was produced and directed by Charles Chaplin. It was his second appearance in a production by his father. In 1952 he played a young composer in "Limelight."

The younger Chaplin is proud of his father's historic stature in the film world.

"My father invented the big salaries in this business," he remarked. "He was the first man to ask and get a million dollars a year. He was always a good businessman."

Life with father in Hollywood wasn't too congenial for Sydney as a lad, however, because of his own harum scarum ways.

"Because he had to quit school after the first grade to support his mother, my father always had a great respect for education," he said.

"But I was pretty wild. I had been thrown out of three schools by the time I was 16.

"Dad was terribly disappointed in me at that time. He tried to be strict. He told me, 'You have to be something in life. You must do something to earn a living.

"But how can you tell a kid that he needs to go to work when he lives in a house with 12 servants?

"You know how some kids earn money by setting up a lemonade stand in their front yard? Well, I tried that gimmick, too, but instead of lemonade I sold scotch. Why not? It was there, and easier to do. And at 15 I was getting only $1 a week as an allowance."

A tour of duty during the war, Sydney said, brought an end to his playboy ways and a realization that it was time for him to seek a career of his own.

He helped organize a theater in Hollywood and discovered that father wasn't the only actor in the family. Since then Sydney has appeared in half a dozen films and a notable series of Broadway musicals, including "The Bells Are Ringing," with Judy Holliday and "Funny Girl" with Barbra Streisand.

Sydney maintains homes here and in Paris, where until recently he also owned a restaurant called the Chez Moustache.

Six feet one and powerfully built, Sydney bears little physical resemblance to his father.

Reuther Disturbed By LBJ's Coolness -- Seeks White House Backing For Big Wage Hike Offensive

Detroit: -- For Walter Reuther it is all high noon, now. It's showdown time. And he's playing it as a loner. He confides virtually in no one over at big Solidarity House. He takes virtually no telephone calls from other national labor chiefs. He whirls in and out of their home cities without contacting old friends with whom he once marched shoulder to shoulder.

The mere change of Article Two, Sec. Six of the auto union constitution makes it possible for his massive organization to bolt the AFL-CIO.

But being a loner leaves him unprotected in his triennial offensive against the Big Three auto companies.

He may be so alone this time -- despite the cheering thousands of delegates to his special convention -- that Lyndon Johnson, once his old and good friend, may decide not to ride shotgun for him this fall as he did in '64.

This disturbs the red-haired auto union leader. For it is axiomatic in such tense and tough collective bargaining as must ensue this troubled economic year, that without White House support labor has strong leverage in a mass industry.

And this is a troubled year. Auto industry earnings are down. Layoffs are up. So is the pressure from 200,000 skilled auto workers -- out of 600,000 in the vast network of plants. As on the airlines and railroads and in rubber and even in radio and television, the skilled men and women want premium pay -- well above the big cash increase Reuther must win for his people to keep his union from being ripped by civil war.

There are those insiders who say that the guaranteed annual income -- pay by the year -- for hourly rated employes secretly has been won by Reuther from one of the companies.

The problem is cash. So the problem is getting President Johnson's support. This is just not developing in the White House. True, Mr. Johnson had Reuther over to the LBJ ranch not too long ago.

But there also was the day the redhead went to the White House. That was Feb. 20.

Reuther had a UAW plaque with him for presentation to Mr. Johnson. After testifying on the Hill, the Detroiter drove down to the White House. He had been told to go to a side gate. There was no press. Just trouble-shooter Joe Califano. They went to see the President. There was a long, informal chat wrapped around the brief plaque - presentation formalities. But if there were pictures made, few have seen them. Reuther left as quietly and unnoticed as he came.

No doubt they discussed the coming battle in the automobile industry which may break into one of the longest strikes since 1946. No doubt, too, they discussed Reuther's searing attacks on the rest of the labor movement. They were eyeball to eyeball, but did not see alike.

To Reuther, George Meany may be a "plumber with a banker's mentality." To Lyndon Johnson, Meany is a shrewd and powerful leader of some 14 million unionists. And Meany is his close friend. The President knows that many times what has appeared to be a lack of Meany militancy was just Meany's behind - the - scenes efforts to avert costly crippling strikes.

So there were no stirring joint statements that day nor pictures either with the man who has vowed to drive Meany from the labor movement's leadership.

There also is the problem of Bob Kennedy. There are those in the White House and State Dept. who make certain to tell the President of the strong support many UAW leaders give Bob Kennedy's stop-the-bombing speeches. Virtually all the top UAW powers have been praising Kennedy in speeches before big crowds. This hurts the President where it hurts most - in the labor movement which has steadfastly been his most solid phalanx on foreign affairs policy.

So Reuther goes it alone. He sears the other labor chiefs -- and then calls on them to form a "comprehensive cooperative coordinated organizing crusade." In some instances -- such as the teachers whom he has given $1,-075,000 -- he backs his outcries with cash. Elsewhere he calls for a $30 million drive to unionize the working poor on farms and in slums.

Again he demands a new drive among white collar people and technicians so the labor movement can boast of a total of 35 million members.

But he's a loner. The labor leaders ignore his bitter attacks. Reuther and his crusade is not even on the agenda for the May 8 AFL-CIO Executive Council meeting.

There, the rest of labor's high command will be talking about cooperating with President Johnson.

Walter Reuther, amidst all his followers, appears alone, indeed. He may well have to test the strategy of solitude.

word - of - mouth advertising started an epidemic of conscience trouble, and the next few months brought the Treasury fund $250. The total take now is approaching the $4 - million-a-year-mark!

The average price of a clear conscience seems to be $5 or $10. The most frequent offenses are the second use of postage stamps, pilfering government supplies, and the evasion of income taxes. Most of the offenses are against the government, but Uncle Sam obligingly accepts restitution for private misdeeds, too. Usually this happens when the rightful owner of the money cannot be found.

Uncle Sam has a conscience, too. Many citizens are annoyed by the government's picayune demands for listing large sums down to the last penny. They pay in full dollars only, and the government, having a conscience, must do something with the extra cents. The you-keep-the change contributions go into the Conscience Fund.

Many salesmen are taught to avoid the phrase 'the price is only so much.'

Offhand you might think the remark would flatter the customer. It implies that he is used to dealing in big sums and that the matter of a few pennies is of concern only to his house-keeper or gardener, not to himself.

But the wary customer grows nervous.

For a quarter you can buy a weekly magazine of over 200 pages.

For only a nickel customers will abandon one grocery store and buy their bread from another store.

For only a small saving, people will buy out-of-season and carry food from summertime till cold weather. Other people will trudge all over town to save only a dime here and a dollar there.

The way to appeal to a customer's pocketbook is to take sides with him, rather than against him. Appreciate that he has many outlets for his money and that he is anxious to make his money reach all the way around. Help him see the advantages to him of buying your product. Talk profits.

But don't let yourself think of any sum of money as unimportant.

NEW PROPOSAL TO CHECK THE SUPREME COURT

The constant abuse of power by the United States Supreme Court is becoming almost intolerable to thinking Americans. The Court is relentlessly striking down, one after another, all of the safeguards a free people have established, under law, to preserve their freedom and protect the rights of the innocent. Known, confessed and convicted criminals have been let loose by the Court to rob and kill again. School authorities have been denied the authority to discharge known communists from teaching positions.

Our Constitution is a structure of checks and balances. But one necessary check was omitted from it, because the founders never imagined that judges of the highest court in the land would usurp the power to make law. As a result, there in now no Constitutional restraint on the authority and decisions of Supreme Court Judges. As conditions now stand, a bare one-man majority of the Supreme Court can overturn any law and issue decrees binding on any Legislative or Executive body, with no recourse remaining even where the will of the people has been clearly expressed.

A Constitutional Amendment has been introduced in the House of Representatives which would permit a two-thirds majority of both houses of Congress, to over-ride any decision by the Supreme Court, just as a two-thirds majority of both Houses can now over-ride a Presidential veto. This proposal deserves very careful examination. Whether or not it is the best way to curb and check the Supreme Court, it is clear that some way must soon be found. A free people cannot be ruled by five judges appointed for life. HLH

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- The navy is trying to suppress the fantastic story of a real - life Caine Mutiny, closely following the plot of the celebrated Herman Wouk Novel. This one happened not in World War II but aboard a radar picket destroyer on combat duty off Vietnam.

The junior officers even kept a "captain's madness log," as in the "Caine Mutiny," to use as evidence against their commanding officer. He is Lt. Cmdr. Marcus Aurelius Arnheiter and the "Mutiny" took place aboard the U.S.S. Vance.

The investigative report shows clearly, however, that Arnheiter was no Captain Queeg.

Here is the story the navy is trying to keep quiet:

A group of young officers had been operating the U.S.S. Vance more like a yacht than a warship until Arnheiter took command a few days before Christmas, 1965. At sea, they enjoyed a leisurely life, including movies every afternoon. At anchor, they went joy riding and water skiing in an outboard motorboat they had acquired ashore.

Discipline aboard the Vance was so relaxed that an enlisted crewman complained to his congressman: "No one knows or cares what you are doing. You get no recognition for keeping your gear up. In fact, no one knows whether it is working or not. The officers don't check us; they don't look at our logs. They don't inspect our gear or our spaces."

This letter got back to Rear Adm. Walter H. Baumberger, then commander of the cruiser destroyer force in the Pacific, who cited it in a notice to all his ships. Without mentioning names, he wrote: "The attached letter was recently received via a congressman... (it) points up the misuse of a specific individual and states quite eloquently the frustrations experienced by a number of our young bluejackets. It is my fervent hope that such a situation does not now exist in any of our ships."

SKIPPER CRACKS DOWN

To restore combat efficiency aboard the Vance, Arnheiter began cracking down. This spoiled the fun of his junior officers, who chafed under the new discipline.

Shortly after Arnheiter become Skipper, the ship was ordered to the war zone. Her mission was to patrol the Coast, intercept the smuggling of Communist contraband and bombard enemy targets on shore.

He mounted a .30 - caliber machinegun on the outboard runabout, trained the ship's crew in the use of the big three - inch guns and taught them how to use rifles in case they should have to repel boarders. Then he began patrolling close to the shore, searching the coves and inlets for suspicious junks. He also requested spotter planes to point out spotter planes to the ship's big guns.

The junior officers complained that he was taking unnecessary risks and that they could patrol by radar beyond the barrier reef 20 miles out.

Soon they began to plot against Arnheiter. Once he saw in the ward room an open copy of Herman Wouk's "Caine Mutiny Court Martial," the stage version of the original novel.

Meanwhile, three subordinates -- Lt. Ray Hardy, the executive officer; Lt. (J. G.) William Generous, the operations officer; and Ensign Louis Belmonte -- were compiling a long list of petty grievances against Arnheiter, entered by Belmonte in the "captain's madness log."

RELIGIOUS SERVICES

The trouble really began when Generous, a Catholic complained in a letter to a priest, Lt. Richard Osterman, that Arnheiter was compelling all hands to attend protestant services on the ship's fantail.

"Three times now," the Lieutenant wrote, "the crew has been ordered aft... For these euphemistic church calls... I cannot accept illegality and infringement of my constitutional rights. I seek relief from this burden, but I do so anonymously, once again for the sake of my family. Is there something that you can do?"

Unknown to Arnheiter, Chaplain Osterman registered a complaint with higher authorities. Ensign Belmonte, the Lay Catholic leader on board, pressed the charges in complaints to other chaplains.

Investigation developed that the skipper, an Episcopalian, had not been holding protestant services. Invocations and benedictions were offered, but were taken from the navy's own booklet of "Prayers At Sea." He had held these services in order to instill patriotism and prepare his men spiritually for combat.

One of Generous's specific complaints was that the crew had been called on to sing all four verses of "America", and that the ference in the fourth verse to "Our Fathers' God to Thee, Author of Liberty," had protestant connocations.

When the charges eventually were investigated, it was found "that although the nature of the initial lectures did have religious overtones, the tenor of the program subsequently changed to conform with the spirit of general order 21 to which objection could not reasonably be raised."

The other charges were even more petty, including the complaint that Arnheiter had declared candy "unfit for consumption" in order to give it to hungry Vietnamese children.

Prior to these findings, however, Arnheiter was abruptly removed from his command. He was neither informed of the charges against him nor given an opportunity to reply. The admirals acted precipitously out of concern for the ship's morale in a war zone.

But having made their decision, they refused to back down -- even after investigation proved the charges to be frivolous.

Thus Arnheiter was cashiered, in effect, for bringing discipline to his ship and pressing the war too vigorously.

Mrs. Larry Gene Eftink

Connie Margaret Gentry Is Bride of Larry G. Eftink

ORAN -- Palms, baskets of carnations, rose buds and greenery decorated the sanctuary of the Guardian Angel Catholic church for the Saturday morning wedding of Miss Connie Margaret Gentry and Larry Gene Eftink.

The Rev. Gervace Ingoldsby performed the double ring ceremony. The Guardian Angel school choir sang accompanied by Sister Sebastain, organist. The nuptial mass was served by Don Eftink, brother of the groom, and Mark Dannenmueller, cousin of the groom.

The former Miss Gentry is the daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth Gentry of Scott City. Eftink is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Eftink.

The birde, given in marriage by her godfather, Arthur Eftink, wore a formal gown of white nylon organza. It featured an oval neckline and long tapered sleeves. The front skirt was accented with embroidery. Soft gathers at the back of the skirt formed a fullness that swept into a full chapel train. Her four-tiered veil of imported English illusion was held secure by a headpiece of roses, seed pearls and crystals. She carried a cascade bouquet of white roses entwined with greenery and orange blossoms.

Mrs. Leslie W. White, Jr., of Scott City was matron of honor. Miss Wilma Hartle of Oxon Hill, Mid., and Miss Jane Eftink, sister of the groom were bridesmaids.

They wore floor-length gowns of nile green silk organza and cotton Cluny lace over taffeta. The sabrina necklines dipped low in the backs and were edged with Venetian lace. The lace was repeated at the bottom of the ruffles of the elbow-length sleeves. The skirts of the dresses were semi-controlled with soft inverted pleats around the waistlines. Watteau trains were attached at the backs of the necklines with tailored bows and the trains swept to floor length.

The attendants wore clusters of flowers securing bouffant veils of silk maline dyed to match the gowns. They each carried a single long stemmed red rose with white streamers.

David Jansen served as best man and Jimmie Eftink of Chaffee, cousin of the groom, and Dick Gentry of Scott City, brother of the bride, were groomsmen. Eddie Eftink of Perkins and Jerry Eftink of Chaffee served as ushers.

The flower girl was Angelia Richards, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gus Richards. She wore a pale green dress with a lace overskirt. She carried a basket of rose petals. Kevin Eftink, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Eftink of Perkins was ring bearer.

An all day reception was held at the Knights of Columbus hall following the wedding. The bride's table was covered with a green taffeta cloth overlaid with dark green net. Guests were served by Miss Judy Eftink and Miss Linda Eftink of Perkins. Mrs. Stanley Wallace was in charge of the guest book.

The new Mrs. Eftink is a 1965 graduate of Illmo - Scott City high school and the Cape Girardeau School of Beauty Culture. She is employed by Hazel's Beauty Shop in Illmo. Eftink is employed by Atlas Plastics in Cape Girardeau.

The couple will live in Oran.

Basswood is sold under the name of whitewood.

Lowell Webb New Member of Eastern Star

Sikeston chapter 137, Order of the Eastern Star, met April 13, with Mrs. Arvil Nickell, worthy matron, presiding.

The Flag was presented and all repeated the pledge of allegiance led by the worthy patron, Clarence Sadler.

Lowell Webb was initiated into the order.

Mrs. Micky Holyfield, chairman of the ways and means committee, reported on the progress of the toothbrush sale and urged everyone to help with this project.

It was announced that Mrs. Florence Nicholson was in the hospital and improving from surgery. Mrs. Maxine Bailey is home after a lengthy stay in the hospital.

A card of thanks was read from Mrs. Dorothy Springs for flowers and cards sent her in the hospital. A note of thanks was read from Mrs. Dessie Allen for kindnesses in bereavement.

The worthy matron announced that a rummage sale would be held May 13. Members were urged to collect rummage and take it to Mrs. Alberta Ingram or Mrs. Virginia Nickell.

May 18 was announced as the date for the Masonic annual barbeque.

It was decided to have a family potluck dinner at 6 p.m., Thursday, April 27, the next regular meeting night. Members should bring their favorite dessert, salad or vegetable dish to serve 12. Meat will be furnished by the chapter.

The decorating committee consisting of Mickey Holyfield, Naomi Davis, Alberta Ingram, Martha Bell, Sue Collier, Edith Ford, Evelyn Struwe, and Margaret Taylor, were honored and given gifts by the worthy matron.

Refreshments were served. Hosts and hostesses were, Naomi Davis, Dorothy and Walter Powell, Eleanor George, Carolyn Goehri, Emma and Cecil Owens, and Eula Crites.

Mrs. Joe Barnes Sorority Leader

The Delta Gamma chapter of Beta Sigma Phi met April 3 in the community room of Security National Bank with Mrs. Keith Settle, president, presiding.

New officers elected were Mrs. Joe Barnes, president; Mrs. Mike Taylor, vice president; Mrs. Ed Smith, recording secretary; Mrs. Floyd Carr, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Tom Gilmore, treasurer.

Mrs. Settlle presented a program on "The Art of Thinking" and gave a book review on "Acres of Diamonds."

Dessert and coffee were served by Mrs. Carl Muench, hostess.

BOOKS ON GARDENING bring readers to the library. Mrs. Wayne Woodard, 205 North Stoddard, scans a volume. Her daughter, Valenda, five, is with her.

Considerable reading at the library is from special shelves.

Sikeston is a city of fine homes and gardens. It has numerous garden clubs. The interest is reflected in a garden shelf of books and Garden magazine in a periodical stall.

Greatest demand is for books on shrubbery and landscaping.

Subject matter of garden books really blooms - bugs, pruning, plant encyclopedia, gardens for young Americans, growing for showing, songs birds in the garden, flora in Missouri, flower family albun, wildflowers, trees, herb gardening, bulbs, easy ways to a beautiful garden, roses, flower arrangement, tuberous begonias, dried flowers, flowering trees, windowsill gardening, house plants, African violets, practical gardening.

Flowers in winter garden, arranging cut flowers, landscaping with vines, shrubs, flowering cactii, shady gardens, ormanental trees, camellias, iris, guide to gardening under lights, geraniums, garden pinks, how to make a cut-flower test, flower show, hydrangeas, evergreens, flowering shrubs, wild flowers, artificial flowers and budget landscaping.

The Missouri shelf has its devotees. Here are volumes on the state's history, folklore and government. There also are books with Missouri settings and fiction with other locale by Missouri authors. Copies of the Missouri Historical Review are available.

There are numerous books on a travel shelf, numerous guides, including the Life World library, the WPA series of guide books on some neighboring states and Missouri. These books and travel magazanes provide sound background before a trip anywhere in the world and relived memories for the returned traveler.

Some of the enduring, non-fiction books are those on the memorial shelf. These represent an extension of the personality of Sikeston residents no longer among the living. Often those who use this means of paying their respects to the dead give the library round sums.

In the absence of a request for a specific title, the staff tries to pick a book appropriate to the memory of the deceased of if they are unfamiliar with his tastes one that is in harmony with the interests of the donor.

There is some interest in the biography shelf.

Cookbooks also occupy a shelf. Cookie and candy recipes are the most popular.

Books on familiar finance, estate planning and on other economic topics are available as well as a basic book on money management -- The Kiplinger Book on Investing for the Years Ahead by John Hazard.

In Case Some of The Citizens Might Have Missed This Letter From Mr. Coleman Who Served As A Member Of The BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS For 28 Years

Mr. Charles L. Blanton, Jr.
Editor, Sikeston Standard
Sikeston, Missouri
Dear Charlie:

I have been asked several times the past few days what I thought about the Bond Issue to purchase the Missouri Utilities properties in Sikeston. I am absolutely for this 100 percent, and I think everyone else would be for it if they knew the real situation.

It is uneconomical and needlessly costly to have two utilities serve the same area.

It would be just the same as having two telephone companies or two gas or water companies to service Sikeston. It is a needless duplication of service, and costly too. With the addition of the 2,027 new customers, the Board of Public Works can better maintain its present low cost of electricity. Incidentally, the 2,027 new customers will get a lower rate than they now pay. Competition has nothing to do with the rates as the utilities rates are set by the Public Service Commission and the Public Works rates by the City. These rates, in both cases, must be set to pay expenses and make a reasonable profit. In our case, the profits accrue to the City.

I can assure you that there will be no RATE INCREASE - on the contrary, the buying of this property will help to maintain the present low rate that we now enjoy.

These will be revenue bonds and will be paid out of earnings. There will be NO TAXES. The light plant was built in 1931 with $150,000.00 bond issue!!!! Since that time, $5,291,065.30 has been invested in the system and there has never been a TAX DOLLAR SPENT ON THE PLANT - ALL OF THIS HAS BEEN PAID FROM EARNINGS FROM THE LIGHT PLANT.

There has been some question about the light plant not paying any taxes. It is true that it does not pay taxes. However, in place of taxes the light plant has contributed electricity for all public buildings and street lighting since it started in 1931. For 1966 this amounted to $48,504.00. If the City had to collect taxes to pay utility it would mean that your taxes would have to be raised 30 cents per 100 valuation.

So, there will be no taxes involved, no increase in rates, and a much better operating problem and continued free service to the City. This decision regarding the light plant is the most important one since the voting of the original bond issue. I cannot understand why everyone would not be for it. Let's make it a unanimous vote. The bond buyers will like this.

Yours truly,
E. P. Coleman, Jr.

I can assure you that there will be no RATE INCREASE - on the contrary, the buying of this property will help to maintain the present low rate that we now enjoy.

These will be revenue bonds and will be paid out of earnings. There will be NO TAXES. The light plant was built in 1931 with $150,000.00 bond issue!!!! Since that time, $5,291,065.30 has been invested in the system and there has never been a TAX DOLLAR SPENT ON THE PLANT - ALL OF THIS HAS BEEN PAID FROM EARNINGS FROM THE LIGHT PLANT.

There has been some question about the light plant not paying any taxes. It is true that it does not pay taxes. However, in place of taxes the light plant has contributed electricity for all public buildings and street lighting since it started in 1931. For 1966 this amounted to $48,504.00. If the City had to collect taxes to pay utility it would mean that your taxes would have to be raised 30 cents per 100 valuation.

So, there will be no taxes involved, no increase in rates, and a much better operating problem and continued free service to the City. This decision regarding the light plant is the most important one since the voting of the original bond issue. I cannot understand why everyone would not be for it. Let's make it a unanimous vote. The bond buyers will like this.

Yours truly,
E. P. Coleman, Jr.

Sub-District Finals Today

Bulldogs Club Wildcats

The Bulldogs, behind two-hit pitching of Rudy Manley and a 13-hit barrage, from his teammates, set the Bloomfield Wildcats down and out of the sub-district baseball tournament at VFW stadium yesterday afternoon, 12-1.

Manley's one-run pitching performance was topped by his 14 strikeouts and 15 putouts. Manley went five innings, in which he collected 14 strikeouts. The lone out was credited to the second basemen.

The offensive attack of the Dogs was too much for the Wildcats to bear as they pounded 13 hits and 12 runs in four innings. Mike Garner collected three hits in four times at bat while teammate Wayne Limbaugh went two for two. Sixteen men got into the game for the Dogs.

Bloomfield, who jumped to a 1-0 lead in the first inning on one hit and three Sikeston errors, was quickly set down.

Manley collected three strikeouts to end the inning after the run scored after two were out.

Coach Hal Lane's squad wasted little time in tying the score. Greg Bailey grounded out to the shortstop to start the bottom of the first but three successive hits by Limbaugh, Garner and Manley pushed across one run.

Limbaugh, Garner, Manley and Farris scored in the inning as the Dogs collected four hits and Bloomfield made two errors. Edwards collected the fourth hit of the inning and drove Manley and Farris around to score.

It was nothing but a rout the rest of the game. Manley shot down the second inning batters with strikeouts and collected three more in each of the fourth and fifth innings. The Bulldogs added four runs in the second, two in each of the third and fourth innings for their 12 runs. Bloomfield was held to no runs in its final four innings and collected only one hit.

Today's final game in the sub-district tournament will pit Sikeston against Richland and its left handed pitching star, Stan Gaylord. The winner will advance into district play at Sikeston. Game time is 3:30 p.m.

Golfers Take Fifth Win

BY ARNIE

The Bulldog golfers won their fifth consecutive match of the season yesterday by defeating the Tigers of Caruthersville, 167 - 191. The golfer's record for the year is five wins against one defeat.

Church Meyer led the Sikeston scorers with 40. He took medalist honors for the match one stroke ahead of Senior Charles Stamp, who carded a 41.

Ned Matthews and King Sidwell ran the total to 167 with a 43 apiece. The winning string on the Sikeston course is now 11.

Gary Lucy led the Caruthersville scorers. Lucy had a 45 ahead of Ricky Davis 47, Van McClendon 49, and Mike Abbott who finished with a .50.

Sikeston's 24 - stroke victory was Caruthersville's fifth defeat of the year. The Tigers are yet to win a meet.

Seniors David Whiteaker and Jim Hux each carded 47s for Sikeston. Caruthersville's other scorers were Pat Slentz 52 and Ken Wimberly 54.

Junior Chuck Meyer now leads the Sikeston team with a 41.5 average in the six first meets. He is followed close behind by Ned Matthews and Charles Stamp.

The Bulldog team average is 164.5, a respectable record. If the Dogs hold his average in the district meet in May, it could mean a trip to state.

Clay Will Appear, Will Not Take Oath

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Heavyweight champion Cassius Clay says he will not go into the Army "no matter what it costs me."

Clay told a news conference he would appear for induction in Houston next week, "but I won't take the oath."

For months, Clay has fought a losing battle to avoid the draft on grounds that military duty would be contrary to his Black Muslim religion.

Clay is slated for induction next Friday at Houston, the city he now calls his home. He had his case transferred there from his draft board in Louisville.

The champ came back to Louisville this week "to be with my people" during a controversy over an open-housing law.

"The situation in Louisville has a lot to do with my decision not to go in the Army but it's not the main reason," Clay said Thursday.

He appeared earlier in the week at a rally for advocates of open housing but did not march in the almost nightly demonstrations. The city has refused to pass such a law.

Clay said he would not enter the Army, even in a non-combatant role.

A spokesman for the draft board said if Clay refused to be inducted, he would be required to sign a paper stating his refusal. The case then would be turned over to the federal district attorney for disposition.

There was no immediate indication about the way Clay's action could affect the boxing title.

President Robert Evans of the World Boxing Association said it was too early to make a statement about the status of the case should Clay be imprisoned for refusing to serve in the Army.

The Justice Department said if Clay held to his plan, the Selective Service System presumably would recommend he be prosecuted.

Netmen Nab Second Win

The Bulldog tennis team defeated the Caruthersville Tigers yesterday 5-3 for its second victory of the season. The netmen's record for the year is two wins against three defeats.

In the singles division, number-one man, Hank Lippert, defeated the Tiger's Kenny Bruce 6-1 and 11-9.

Junior Bob McCord of Sikeston lost his match to Jim Hedricks 6-0 and 6-0.

Wythe Miller had his troubles yesterday. He lost to Jim Teroy of Caruthersville 2-6, 6-4, and 2-6.

Senior Bill Dickerson won easily over Mike Ownby in sets of 6-3 and 6-1.

Ron Hill can't be defeated. He won his fourth straight match of the year by defeating Terry Thomas 6-2 and 6-1.

Brad Crumpecker of Sikeston didn't lose a game as he defeated Jim Norman in sets of 6-0 and 6-0.

The Bulldogs split the doubles competition as the Dickerson and Lippert team got its revenge after losing Tuesday's match.

Miller and McCord were beaten by Bruce and Hendricks 6-0, 4-6, and 6-8.

Playing consistently Dickerson and Lippert defeated Teroy and Ownby 6-4 and 6-4.

The netmen will play host to the Tigers of Cape Girardeau Central in a dual meet at the high school Saturday at 10 a.m.

SHS Report

By Dan Spears

The northern conference track and field meet will be held this afternoon and night at the public schools stadium.

Cape Girardeau Central won the meet last year taking an easy victory. Kennett was its closest opponent with Sikeston taking fourth. Participating in the events will be Charleston, Cape Central Perryville, Jackson, Kennett, Poplar Bluff, and Sikeston.

The Kennett Indians are the pre - meet favorite with Charleston and Cape Central fighting it out for second place.

Quite a few school and meet records are expected to be broken today if the weather holds out and doesn't wet down the track.

Sikeston coach, Norman Lambert said that the track is in fine condition. He hopes for a big turnout. Preliminaries will begin at 4 p.m. The finals will be run at 7 p.m.

BATTING - Ken Berry, White Sox, smashed three hits, scored one run and drove in another in Chicago's 8-4 victory over Washington.

PITCHING - Steve Hargan, Indians, pitched a five-hitter, shutting out Kansas City 2-0 for Cleveland's fourth straight victory.

76ers Take 3-1 Edge In Series

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—"We want to win it Sunday," declared Coach Alex Hannum whose Philadelphia 76ers have the National Basketball Association title within their grasp.

Sharpshooting by Hal Greer, Chet Walker and Wally Jones plus a fantastic defensive performance by 7-foot 1-inch Wilt Chamberlain brought Philadelphia a 122-108 triumph over San Francisco's Warriors Thursday night and a 3-1 edge in their best - of - 7 final series.

Returning to Philadelphia for Sunday's battle, the crown appeared all but wrapped up for the 76ers, the first for Chamberlain since he joined the league in 1960.

"Wilt never played better," admitted Warrior Coach Bill Sharman. "Every time I looked up, he was blocking a shot. He must have blocked 15."

The big star also pulled down 27 rebounds and had 8 assists.

"I don't believe he ever has had a better defensive game," added Hannum who appears on the verge of gaining revenge on the Warriors who fired him after last season.

Jones hit 14 points in the first quarter and then suffered an injury to his right ankle. Greer took up the slack and, after only two free throws in the opening period, finished with 38 points for the night.

Walker unloaded in the final stanza with 14 and 33 total to insure victory before 15,117, the largest crowd over to watch pro basketball in San Francisco. Another 1,300 took in the game via closed - circuit television at the downtown Civic Auditorium.

The triple-pronged 76er attack compensated for a 43 - point output from the Warriors' Rick Barry.

The 30-year-old Greer commented, "For an old man, I guess I had a good game. Everyone took up the slack but we could not break the game open. We would get up by 15 and 17 and they would come back."

With three minutes left, the Warriors cut the edge to eight points but then it was Greer, with two free throws and a field goal, who broke it open.

Advance Star Signs Letter Of Intent

POPLAR BLUFF -- A familiar face will be on the basketball scene when Three Rivers Junior College opens the season next year in Bill Morgan. He is a 6 foot guard that has had a very fine career at Advance high school.

He brings the total number of athletes to sign scholarships to eight. Bill has been an outstanding performer since his sophomore year. His first year to play on the varsity merited him with an honorable mention on the All Conference Team. His junior year he received the following honors: First team all conference, all class "M", first team on KWOC all district team, honorable mention on the all district team, and honorable mention all state. During his junior and senior year he lead his team in the scoring department.

The honors received by Bill his senior year were a repeat of his junior year with the exception that Advance enrollment dropped to class "S" after being in class "M" the previous year.

Morgan ranks as one of the finest shooters in Southeast Missouri and should give more scoring potential to the team. He is an outstanding ball handler and should give the other players a good run for one of the guard positions.

Coach Bob Cradic states:

"The eight players that have signed a letter of intent to attend Three Rivers College next year should give us a nucleus around which we can build a fine team. It will be difficult for five freshmen to compete against some of the more experienced teams but I believe that our lack of experience can be offset by a tremendous amount of desire. We still don't have a big man but we have good team size. The question remains as to whether these boys can jell into a working unit in just one season. Recruiting has been completed for some time and our schedule is nearing completion with an 18 game slate.

Cards Suffer First Defeat

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

St. Louis, jolted out of the winning groove by San Francisco, hopes to get back on the track tonight against the Los Angeles Dodgers on the West Coast.

The Giants ended the Cardinals' winning streak at six games Thursday with a 7-5 victory at San Francisco. The win broke a Giant losing streak at six games.

The Kansas City Athletics, who fell, 2-0, to Cleveland Thursday, meet the Orioles tonight in Baltimore.

Bob Gibson, 2-0, is the scheduled starter for the Cardinals. Don Drysdale, 0-1, has been given the Los Angeles assignment.

A's Manager Alvin Dark tapped Jim Hunter, 1-0, to start against Baltimore and Tom Phoebus.

A five-run second inning gave the Giants the steam they needed to end the Cardinals' winning ways. Ken Henderson's two-run single highlighted the inning for the home team. A bases-filled error by Cardinal shortstop Dal Maxvill was a big factor in the inning.

Bob Bolin, aided by Lindy McDaniel, Bill Henry and Frank Linzy, was credited with the victory.

The Indians victory took the edge off an American League announcement Thursday that there is no rule against a team wearing white shoes.

Indians Manager Joe Adcock complained the white shoes worn by Kansas City interfere with a batter's ability to see the baseball.

Steve Hargan pitched the five-hit shutout for the Cleveland club. Lew Krausse was charged with the loss.

Cleveland scored its runs in the second inning. Fred Whitfield doubled, Duke Sims walked, Gus Gil singled and a throwing error by Ken Suarez accounted for the markers.

Golfers Take Fifth Win

BY ARNIE

The Bulldog golfers won their fifth consecutive match of the season yesterday by defeating the Tigers of Caruthersville, 167 - 191. The golfer's record for the year is five wins against one defeat.

Church Meyer led the Sikeston scorers with 40. He took medalist honors for the match one stroke ahead of Senior Charles Stamp, who carded a 41.

Ned Matthews and King Sidwell ran the total to 167 with a 43 apiece. The winning string on the Sikeston course is now 11.

Gary Lucy led the Caruthersville scorers. Lucy had a 45 ahead of Ricky Davis 47, Van McClendon 49, and Mike Abbott who finished with a .50.

Sikeston's 24 - stroke victory was Caruthersville's fifth defeat of the year. The Tigers are yet to win a meet.

Seniors David Whiteaker and Jim Hux each carded 47s for Sikeston. Caruthersville's other scorers were Pat Slentz 52 and Ken Wimberly 54.

Junior Chuck Meyer now leads the Sikeston team with a 41.5 average in the six first meets. He is followed close behind by Ned Matthews and Charles Stamp.

The Bulldog team average is 164.5, a respectable record. If the Dogs hold his average in the district meet in May, it could mean a trip to state.

Clay Will Appear, Will Not Take Oath

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Heavyweight champion Cassius Clay says he will not go into the Army "no matter what it costs me."

Clay told a news conference he would appear for induction in Houston next week, "but I won't take the oath."

For months, Clay has fought a losing battle to avoid the draft on grounds that military duty would be contrary to his Black Muslim religion.

Clay is slated for induction next Friday at Houston, the city he now calls his home. He had his case transferred there from his draft board in Louisville.

The champ came back to Louisville this week "to be with my people" during a controversy over an open-housing law.

"The situation in Louisville has a lot to do with my decision not to go in the Army but it's not the main reason," Clay said Thursday.

He appeared earlier in the week at a rally for advocates of open housing but did not march in the almost nightly demonstrations. The city has refused to pass such a law.

Clay said he would not enter the Army, even in a non-combatant role.

A spokesman for the draft board said if Clay refused to be inducted, he would be required to sign a paper stating his refusal. The case then would be turned over to the federal district attorney for disposition.

There was no immediate indication about the way Clay's action could affect the boxing title.

President Robert Evans of the World Boxing Association said it was too early to make a statement about the status of the case should Clay be imprisoned for refusing to serve in the Army.

The Justice Department said if Clay held to his plan, the Selective Service System presumably would recommend he be prosecuted.

Netmen Nab Second Win

The Bulldog tennis team defeated the Caruthersville Tigers yesterday 5-3 for its second victory of the season. The netmen's record for the year is two wins against three defeats.

In the singles division, number-one man, Hank Lippert, defeated the Tiger's Kenny Bruce 6-1 and 11-9.

Junior Bob McCord of Sikeston lost his match to Jim Hedricks 6-0 and 6-0.

Wythe Miller had his troubles yesterday. He lost to Jim Teroy of Caruthersville 2-6, 6-4, and 2-6.

Senior Bill Dickerson won easily over Mike Ownby in sets of 6-3 and 6-1.

Ron Hill can't be defeated. He won his fourth straight match of the year by defeating Terry Thomas 6-2 and 6-1.

Brad Crumpecker of Sikeston didn't lose a game as he defeated Jim Norman in sets of 6-0 and 6-0.

The Bulldogs split the doubles competition as the Dickerson and Lippert team got its revenge after losing Tuesday's match.

Miller and McCord were beaten by Bruce and Hendricks 6-0, 4-6, and 6-8.

Playing consistently Dickerson and Lippert defeated Teroy and Ownby 6-4 and 6-4.

The netmen will play host to the Tigers of Cape Girardeau Central in a dual meet at the high school Saturday at 10 a.m.

Senior Play At Matthews

MATTHEWS -- "Here Comes Charlie" by Jay Tobias was presented Friday in matinee and evening performances by members of the senior class. The three-act comedy was directed by Benton B. Conrad. Members of the cast were Kathy Morris, Joe Buchanan, Jeanice Griffin, Danny Lape, Sidney Fraley, Paula Huffstutler, Charles Conrad, Rita Burch, Marlene Davidson and Joe King. Promptors were Peggy Lathum, Barbara Johnson, Nancy Mydlowski, David Schneider and James Stobaugh.

Linda Cain was accompanist for the musical numbers presented between acts -- a musical reading, "The Three Trees" read by Marilyn Davis at the matinee and by Barbara Rogers in the evening. A senior girls chorus sang "O Soldier, Soldier" for a pantomime of Revolutionary War days by Nancy Mydlowski and Barbara Johnson. In charge of programs were Wanda Gail Plunk and Jerrilyn Lawson. Ushers were LaVerle Williams, Sharon McVay, Wanda Tillman, Evelyn Stidham, Donna Polk, and Linda Bledsoe. Judy Danels and Danny Joe Whitten sold tickets at the door.

Relatives and friends of Mrs. Sarah Raper, who has recently moved into a new home, complimented her with a housewarming last Thursday evening. Attending were Mrs. Bob Throop, Mrs. Clifford Laird, Mrs. Kenneth Cauthron, Mrs. Elizabeth Parker, Mrs. Linzle Parker, Mrs. A. W. Wagley, Mrs. Dorsey Spradling, Mrs. Shirley Littleton, Mrs. A. L. Odom, Mrs. L. D. Waters, Mrs. George Gaines, Mrs. Boyd Raper and Mrs. Harvey Kelso.

Mr. and Mrs. Webb Sibley accompanied their son, Pvt. Michael Sibley, to St. Louis Friday where he took a plane to San Francisco, Calif. He was to leave from there for assignment in Viet Nam.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Lomax returned Sunday to their home in Zephyr Hills, Fla., after visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Lomax.

Visiting here during the weekend with their brother, Charles Mainord, and sister, Mrs. Retta Kellett in Sikeston, were Mrs. Wendell Shryock and Fred Mainord of Anderson, Ind., and Ray Mainord of St. Louis, and Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Mainord of Jackson. Mrs. Shryock and Mrs. Kellett visited Sunday afternoon with their aunt, Mrs. L. D. Waters.

Mrs. W. C. Moore, Mr. and Mrs. Burl Gives, Mrs. Wayne Greene and Fred Moser visited with the family of the late Mrs. Dorothy Hill at the funeral home in Hayti last Tuesday evening. Mrs. Moore, Mrs. Clarence Sutton, Mrs. Maude Rice, Mrs. Clifford Sutton, Mrs. Charles Lumsden, Mrs. L. D. Waters and Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Waters attended the funeral on Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. Douglas Zilafro and baby son have been dismissed from the Missouri Delta Community hospital at Sikeston where he was born on April 6. The child is the first in the family and has been named Troy Douglas. Mrs. Douglas is the former Miss Shelia Leech.

Mrs. A. L. Odom fractured a leg in a fall while fishing Saturday afternoon.

The Matthews Community Club will meet at the home of Mrs. Lloyd Eby Thursday at 8 p.m. A program on "Take-off Meals -- Salads" will be presented by Mrs. Eby and Mrs. Lester King.

Mr. and Mrs. Herschel Yates had as an overnight guest last Thursday his brother, James Yates, of Honolulu, Hawaii. Yates, who is employed by an airlines and was here on a business trip, on Friday accompanied his mother, Mrs. Henry Yates, as far as Denver, Colo., on a trip to Albuquerque, N.M., where she will visit her daughter, Mrs. Albert Jensen. Mrs. Yates Sr. nas been a patient at the Shuffit Nursing Home no. 3 for the past few months.

Steele Musicians Will Be Soloists

JONESBORO, Ark. -- Fourteen soloists from the Arkansas State University division of music will be presented in a recognition recital Monday at 8:15 p.m. in Wilson auditorium.

Among the performers will be Hollie Farris, trumpet; and Sarah Carter, soprano, both of Steele, Mo.

Armed Forces

(H0579) USS JAMES C. OWENS (DD-776) (FHTNC) -- Seaman Jerry F. Davis, USN, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arden Davis of Gray Ridge, Mo., is in the Caribbean taking part in a joint service amphibious training exercise named "Clove Hitch III," as a crewmember aboard the destroyer USS James C. Owens.

His unit comprises a segment of more than 21,000 men of the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps and Puerto Rican National Guard who will be participating.

The two-week exercise began April 15, and is designed to provide training in joint "over-the-beach" landing operations. In addition to exacting close cooperation between the services, it will refine the capabilities of the Atlantic Command to respond quickly in any emergency.

Once ashore, the amphibious forces will be conducting counter-querrilla operations, opposed by mock aggressors.

War Mixes Boredom, Panic for Navy Pilots

ABOARD USS ENTERPRISE (AP) — The air war over North Vietnam is "hours of boredom and seconds of sheer panic," says one pilot. It brings out a rare mesh of the physical and mental in the naval pilot.

The high-performance A4 Skyhawks, F4 Phantoms, A6 Intruders and RA5 Vigilantes on the deck of the Enterprise compare with speeding bullets. Instruments tell the pilot where the plane is going. The aircraft responds to only the most carefully considered control.

Somehow, the pilot maintains a sense of order as he careens into a rollover where the green of the ground and blue of the sky spin above his canopy.

In a dive, the trees may shoot up, or dash out the left side of the eye in favor of a river, a field, and another river —in 10 seconds.

Pulling out of a dive, G forces cram the pilot into his seat. An air-pressure suit keeps all his blood from settling into his boots.

In taking off the pilot is hurled down a catapult, from zero to 150 miles per hour in three seconds and 50 yards. Coming home he lands at 130 m.p.h., trying to catch a cable with a tail hook he cannot see. This goes on in fog, haze, sunshine, darkness, and when the tepid rain of the Tonkin Gulf sweeps over the deck.

Naval pilots live in twos in air-conditioned quarters. A picture of a girlfriend, or a wife and three children in a park somewhere, is on the wall. There are tape recorders, a small ice box with fresh cheese. A brisk shower and good food are just a few steps down the passageway.

The pilot stays home one day, flies three missions the next. Every time he is committed to a target there are flak, streams of red tracers searching for him like water out of a hose, and surface to air missiles that seem like Roman candles.

Around North Vietnamese railroad yards, power plants and bridges are dug-in SAMS and 37, 57, 85, and 100mm "barrels" or flak guns, manned 24 hours, warned by radar and flushed out with thousands of hand-held machine guns and rifles.

"These people are not defenseless," says a veteran of 52 missions. "I swear everyone of them has a gun."

The inventiveness, savvy and training of the pilot, coupled with bales of computerized intelligence, and defensive equipment, make repeated attacks possible.

The three Navy carriers in the Tonkin Gulf exact swift retribution. Bombs, rockets, aircraft and pilot can be mated quickly to respond to fresh intelligence.

The coast is 20 minutes away. The Air Force must come farther, from Thailand. One day the Enterprise alone launched more strikes than the entire Air Force. At the beginning of the war Navy pilots flew 80 per cent of the sorties. Now they average slightly more than 50 per cent.

Convict With Cancer Asks For Reprieve

NEW YORK (AP) — A convict with terminal cancer has appealed to Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller to commute his one-year prison term and permit him to spend his remaining time with his wife and four children.

"I'm guilty," William F. Kane, 30, the prisoner, said. He is serving time in the prison ward of Long Island's Meadowbrook Hospital for a $30 stickup.

"But I can't understand why I must serve a life sentence for my crime," he added. "It's only a year's sentence, but that may be more than I have left."

Spencer Steele, one of the prisoner's attorneys, said a letter to Rockefeller requesting executive clemency for Kane was mailed Wednesday.

A spokesman for Rockefeller said the governor does not comment on such requests until he has decided on them.

Kane said he hoped the governor would permit him "the dignity of dying at home with my family."

Although the hospital is not far from the Valley Stream, N.Y., home where his wife and four children reside, Kane has not been able to see the youngsters in four months because of limited visiting facilities.

He was sentenced to a year in Nassau County jail last January after pleading guilty to petty larceny charges before County Judge Martin Kolbrener. The judge also gave him a suspended 7½-15-year term on robbery charges.

It was the latest in a string of felonies involving Kane since 1957. Kolbrener said he acted "leniently" in the case, "a defendant with his kind of record would ordinarily be hit with the maximum."

Kane agreed. "By all rights, a one-year sentence is a real break on the charges I was hit with. But in my condition you might as well make it 10 or 20 years," he said.

Kombrener said there is nothing he can do now, explaining that once a prisoner begins serving a sentence he cannot be placed on probation or resentenced.

Guards at the hospital say Kane looks forward to weekly visits by his wife Joan.

"I want Bill home," she said Wednesday night. "I want to be the one caring for him at the end."

GREENHOUSE

Let Venice be the city of canals, and Chicago hog butcher of the world; Denver the city a mile high and Philadelphia the city of brotherly love; Boston, home of the bean and the cod; and New Orleans the city care forgot; but for Griggsville, Ill., reserve the distinction of Purple Martin Capital of the Nation.

If you are alert as you go north or south on Illinois state route 107, about 25 miles west of Jacksonville, you'll see Griggsville, and if you're there between mid March and mid August, you'll see "America's most wanted bird," in impressive numbers. . .the town's human population is 1,240, but the purple martins outnumber folk many times over. Griggsville likes martins, and martins like Griggsville.

Indeed, the town's tabloid monthly newspaper, bears the name "The Purple Martin Capital News - From Griggsville, Ill.," and devotes all of its space to the friendly birds and other items (with pictures) of wildlife. As if that were not enough, J. L. Wade has written a book, "What You Should Know About the Purple Martin," 218 pages of text and pictures about the birds, including a timetable of arrivals and departures, not only for Griggsville, but also Tennessee and many other places. We should see them in the Volunteer State any time between March and Oct. 1.

Up to this moment, I have been able to take purple martins or leave them alone, but after reading the book and newspaper, I am developing a warm affinity for them, since each martin eats about 2,000 mosquitoes or other noxious insects each day catching them on the wing;) they adore living in manmade houses; they discourage pigeons, sparrows and starlings; and they police up their quarters, bundling up waste and taking it far from the space they share with people.

What better neighbors could you want?

Other communities welcome the birds; the reader board at a Holiday Inn in Houston bore the gladsome tidings, "It Is Purple Martin Time," and Sears Garden Center at Qunicy, Ill., boasts that the birds keep the area bug free.

Griggsville bristles with specially designed houses for purple martins; the cots are made of aluminum, and stand on telescoping poles so that when the birds are gone, they can be lowered for servicing and to rid them of free-loading sparrows who might have moved in after the martins have migrated.

Aficionados of the purple martins deny emphatically that their birds eat honeybees; they lay the blame for this crime on the eastern kingbird, commonly known as "bee martin," but it is not a martin at all, but a member of the fly-catcher family. James Audubon exonerated the purple martin as a foe of honeymakers, and later observers, including William J. Mellor of Eureka Springs, Ark., testified that his colonies of bees and purple martins co-exist quite agreeably.

Well, all this may be for the birds, but it sounds like a good thing.

In a dive, the trees may shoot up, or dash out the left side of the eye in favor of a river, a field, and another river —in 10 seconds.

Pulling out of a dive, G forces cram the pilot into his seat. An air-pressure suit keeps all his blood from settling into his boots.

In taking off the pilot is hurled down a catapult, from zero to 150 miles per hour in three seconds and 50 yards. Coming home he lands at 130 m.p.h., trying to catch a cable with a tail hook he cannot see. This goes on in fog, haze, sunshine, darkness, and when the tepid rain of the Tonkin Gulf sweeps over the deck.

Naval pilots live in twos in air-conditioned quarters. A picture of a girlfriend, or a wife and three children in a park somewhere, is on the wall. There are tape recorders, a small ice box with fresh cheese. A brisk shower and good food are just a few steps down the passageway.

The pilot stays home one day, flies three missions the next. Every time he is committed to a target there are flak, streams of red tracers searching for him like water out of a hose, and surface to air missiles that seem like Roman candles.

Around North Vietnamese railroad yards, power plants and bridges are dug-in SAMS and 37, 57, 85, and 100mm "barrels" or flak guns, manned 24 hours, warned by radar and flushed out with thousands of hand-held machine guns and rifles.

"These people are not defenseless," says a veteran of 52 missions. "I swear everyone of them has a gun."

The inventiveness, savvy and training of the pilot, coupled with bales of computerized intelligence, and defensive equipment, make repeated attacks possible.

The three Navy carriers in the Tonkin Gulf exact swift retribution. Bombs, rockets, aircraft and pilot can be mated quickly to respond to fresh intelligence.

The coast is 20 minutes away. The Air Force must come farther, from Thailand. One day the Enterprise alone launched more strikes than the entire Air Force. At the beginning of the war Navy pilots flew 80 per cent of the sorties. Now they average slightly more than 50 per cent.

Convict With Cancer Asks For Reprieve

NEW YORK (AP) — A convict with terminal cancer has appealed to Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller to commute his one-year prison term and permit him to spend his remaining time with his wife and four children.

"I'm guilty," William F. Kane, 30, the prisoner, said. He is serving time in the prison ward of Long Island's Meadowbrook Hospital for a $30 stickup.

"But I can't understand why I must serve a life sentence for my crime," he added. "It's only a year's sentence, but that may be more than I have left."

Spencer Steele, one of the prisoner's attorneys, said a letter to Rockefeller requesting executive clemency for Kane was mailed Wednesday.

A spokesman for Rockefeller said the governor does not comment on such requests until he has decided on them.

Kane said he hoped the governor would permit him "the dignity of dying at home with my family."

Although the hospital is not far from the Valley Stream, N.Y., home where his wife and four children reside, Kane has not been able to see the youngsters in four months because of limited visiting facilities.

He was sentenced to a year in Nassau County jail last January after pleading guilty to petty larceny charges before County Judge Martin Kolbrener. The judge also gave him a suspended 7½-15-year term on robbery charges.

It was the latest in a string of felonies involving Kane since 1957. Kolbrener said he acted "leniently" in the case, "a defendant with his kind of record would ordinarily be hit with the maximum."

Kane agreed. "By all rights, a one-year sentence is a real break on the charges I was hit with. But in my condition you might as well make it 10 or 20 years," he said.

Kombrener said there is nothing he can do now, explaining that once a prisoner begins serving a sentence he cannot be placed on probation or resentenced.

Guards at the hospital say Kane looks forward to weekly visits by his wife Joan.

"I want Bill home," she said Wednesday night. "I want to be the one caring for him at the end."

PAUL FLOWERS GREENHOUSE

Let Venice be the city of canals, and Chicago hog butcher of the world; Denver the city a mile high and Philadelphia the city of brotherly love; Boston, home of the bean and the cod; and New Orleans the city care forgot; but for Griggsville, Ill., reserve the distinction of Purple Martin Capital of the Nation.

If you are alert as you go north or south on Illinois state route 107, about 25 miles west of Jacksonville, you'll see Griggsville, and if you're there between mid March and mid August, you'll see "America's most wanted bird," in impressive numbers. . .the town's human population is 1,240, but the purple martins outnumber folk many times over. Griggsville likes martins, and martins like Griggsville.

Indeed, the town's tabloid monthly newspaper, bears the name "The Purple Martin Capital News - From Griggsville, Ill.," and devotes all of its space to the friendly birds and other items (with pictures) of wildlife. As if that were not enough, J. L. Wade has written a book, "What You Should Know About the Purple Martin," 218 pages of text and pictures about the birds, including a timetable of arrivals and departures, not only for Griggsville, but also Tennessee and many other places. We should see them in the Volunteer State any time between March and Oct. 1.

Up to this moment, I have been able to take purple martins or leave them alone, but after reading the book and newspaper, I am developing a warm affinity for them, since each martin eats about 2,000 mosquitoes or other noxious insects each day catching them on the wing;) they adore living in manmade houses; they discourage pigeons, sparrows and starlings; and they police up their quarters, bundling up waste and taking it far from the space they share with people.

What better neighbors could you want?

Other communities welcome the birds; the reader board at a Holiday Inn in Houston bore the gladsome tidings, "It Is Purple Martin Time," and Sears Garden Center at Qunicy, Ill., boasts that the birds keep the area bug free.

Griggsville bristles with specially designed houses for purple martins; the cots are made of aluminum, and stand on telescoping poles so that when the birds are gone, they can be lowered for servicing and to rid them of free-loading sparrows who might have moved in after the martins have migrated.

Aficionados of the purple martins deny emphatically that their birds eat honeybees; they lay the blame for this crime on the eastern kingbird, commonly known as "bee martin," but it is not a martin at all, but a member of the flycatcher family. James Audubon exonerated the purple martin as a foe of honeymakers, and later observers, including William J. Mellor of Eureka Springs, Ark., testified that his colonies of bees and purple martins co-exist quite agreeably.

Well, all this may be for the birds, but it sounds like a good thing.

Dinner Guests At Bell City

BELL CITY -- Mrs. Ira Allen and her son - in - law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Garner of Cape Girardeau, were Friday dinner guests of Mrs. Allen's sister, Mrs. Bell Shrum, and her daughter, Mrs. Lillie Hester. Mrs. Shrum and Mrs. Hester have sold their home in Bell City to Marion Green and will move to Meridian, Miss., in July. Green lives on a farm southwest of town and will move here when the house is vacated.

Mrs. Lincoln Sherer and her sisters, Mrs. Norris Edwards and Mrs. Lynn Mouchette, both of Sikeston, left Wednesday by jet airplane for Washington, D. C., to visit their brother's family, Capt. and Mrs. H. S. Matthews, and to attend the change of command ceremonies at Norfolk, Va. Capt. Matthews took command of his ship USS Hermitage. The ceremony took place on board ship. They stayed at Norfolk until Saturday and returned home Sunday. Capt. Matthews has been in the navy 27 years.

The April meeting of the PTA was an open house at the schools. Students' work was on display in their home rooms. Mrs. Jack Spencer is president.

Mrs. Myrtle Dunlap had as weekend guests her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Henley, a granddaughter, Mary Sue Sullivan, and her fiance, Douglas Wondel, all of St. Louis.

James Manley of Belt Buckle, Tenn., was an overnight guest of Lincoln Scherer Sunday. Manley was enroute to Leeton to visit his cousins, Mr. and Mrs. John Armstrong.

Mr. and Mrs. James DeLay entertained over the weekend Mr. and Mrs. Charles Brown and son Edward of Springfield, Ill., another son, Otto Dietrich of Cape Girardeau, and their daughter Diane, a student at Southeast Missouri State College.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Wood had as recent guests his sister, Mrs. Luther Moore, and Gayle McCowin, both of Atlanta, Ga. Mrs. Moore also visited her grandson, Jim Sims of Atlanta, a senior at Southeast Missouri State College. On Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Woods had as dinner guests their children, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Stephens and family and Mr. and Mrs. Gary Woods and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Gary Woods and children were in St. Louis Wednesday to be with her mother, Tony Lewis, who is seriously ill in a hospital. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edd Lewis, formerly of Bell City.

Economy Shows Steady Growth in Bootheel

JEFFERSON CITY -- The economy has been showing steady growth in Southeast Missouri, the Missouri state division of commerce and industrial development, reports. However, there have been temporary setbacks. Approximately 375 employes are involved in a temporary two - month shutdown of Marquette Cement company in Cape Girardeau. Fifty employes may be affected by a partial closing of a sports specialty factory in Chaffee. High inventories are responsible.

The 1966 crop season was plagued with seasonal problems, but overall it was a good year. Although the cotton crop was 43 per cent below 1965, there was little drop in farm income with the substitution of soybeans. Both wheat and soybeans set new records. The change in the 1967 feed grain program allows more acres to be planted and makes the future outlook good.

The number of housing permits reached a post war low for the district. An easing of credit policy is underway but will take some time before home building industries rebound.

Large projects are authorized or underway in district cities. Cape Girardeau projects include a $600,000 building for KFVS television and radio, $1,400,000 federal building, $775,000 vocational high school, and additional facilities for the college. Poplar Bluff has a $400,000 mental retardation clinic and a $300,000 improvement in the city utilities scheduled for 1967. Sikeston will also build a $400,000 mental retardation clinic and is adding a new industries--Schevelle Home Manufacturing company. Educational and medical construction needs will provide additional stimulus in the district.

The positive factors for consideration are: new and expanded industries coming to the area, planned commercial construction, federal grants, agricultural production prospects high and a continued high level of employment. The uncertainties are: amount of credit easing for residential construction, inventory control, Viet Nam war involvement and tax increases. These factors balance to indicate continuation of business growth at a slow steady pace.

In Charleston bank deposits rose 20.7 per cent in October, November and December of 1966 over the same quarter in 1965 from $14,450,600 and $17,448,400; postal receipts declined 2.2 per cent from $21,900 to $21,400; electric current (kilowatt hours) climbed 1.6 per cent from 4,076,700 to 4,142,800; telephones in service from 2,228 to 3,371. a 4.4 per cent gain; gas meters in service from 1,504 to 1,550, up 3 per cent.

Residential building permits in Charleston for the same comparable periods rose 115.5 per cent from $24,500 to $52,500; total commercial permits in the 1966 quarter $3 million, none in 1965.

Chinese Lose Favor in Indonesia

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — Communist China, once Indonesia's great friend and ally, has become a symbol of hate here, and the million or so Chinese aliens in this country are feeling the effects.

An officially sponsored anti-Peking line has combined with traditional anti - Chinese sentiments among Indonesia's Moslem people to create an atmosphere of tension for the Chinese.

This situation developed following the 1965 coup d'etat attempt organized by the pro-Peking Indonesian Communist party, PKI. Communist China was accused of having a hand in it.

The coup was smashed by army forces led by Gen. Suharto, now acting president. The collapse of the Red movement triggered a massive anti-Communist campaign throughout Indonesia in which hundreds of thousands were slain. The PKI was destroyed and its remnants were driven underground.

Since then, Chinese aliens, most of whom owe their allegiance to Peking, have become virtually equated with Communists.

Stern regulations limit the activities of Chinese and subject them to special taxation. They have been banned from trading, their chief livelihood, in such outlying areas as Sumatra. In Jakarta they have been denied permanent residence.

Boycott of Chinese goods is being fostered and Chinese-owned shops are liable to closure by the military.

Peking has been linked with the distribution here of pamphlets in Chinese characters, urging local Chinese to resist the Suharto government.

Accounts of Peking's tirades against Suharto's "new order," labeling it reactionary and fascist, are carried by the official news agency Antara and reprinted in newspapers.

Reports of Red Guard extremism, particularly against Chinese Moslems, are used by Moslem groups here to warn against communism.

Diplomatic relations with Peking are close to the snapping point. There are demands from militantly anti-Communist student and Moslem organizations that the last threads be cut.

Foreign Minister Adam Malik has indicated that the ties will continue at least until a settlement has been reached on the question of repatriating Chinese who want to go back to the mainland.

"What do we do with one million Chinese?" Malik has asked.

When those Chinese who want to leave finally go, they are not likely to be allowed to take much with them.

One military official commented recently:

"Long ago the Chinese came to Indonesia emptyhanded and nobody had invited them to come. They should leave as they came."

PRODUCE PURCHASES BY WOOLWORTH'S SETS NEW RECORD

The amount of pork and poultry purchased by the F. W. Woolworth Co. from Missouri and other poultry and pork producing areas during 1966 reached a new record for the sixth straight year.

The company purchased more than 6,075,000 pounds of poultry and 2,760,000 pounds of pork during 1966, said H. W. Bode, vice president of restaurant operations from the variety and department store chain.

Pointing out that it is a policy of Woolworth's to buy locally where possible, he said, "this policy benefits not only local wholesalers and retailers but many others in the state employed in production and distribution."

Mr. Bode noted that Woolworth's now serves in all 50 states more than one million people each day through 1,754 luncheonettes, 13 in-store cafeterias, 13 Harvest House cafeterias with stores, and 8 free-standing Harvest House restaurants. These facilities can seat 93,836 persons at one time, he said. Indicative of the size of the company's food operations are these totals of items served last year: 19,- turkey dinners, 6,950,000 pieces of apple pie, and over 133 million cups of coffee.

The Woolworth executive predicted that purchases would increase during 1967 because of the anticipated increase in consumer spending and a continuation of the company's expansion program.

"We plan to open 37 new restaurant facilities during the coming year, as well as enlarge and remodel others," he said.

A youngster, lunching with his mother, told her that his new teacher is "mean, but fair." "How's that?" asked his mother. "Oh, she's mean to everyone."

The Dominant Note

BY JOHN GOULD
in the Christian Science Monitor
Rivoli, Italy
All Saints Day, 1966

Italy grows some of the most beautiful apples I've ever seen, but the flavor is a lot like a 10-cent sawdust baseball. I grow apples in Maine, and Maine grows about as many as Italy, and the difference is as great as their distance apart.

The market places abound in beautiful fruit, and I am gorging on delicacies truly not found in our markets at home. But the apples of Italy prove that beauty really is only skin deep, and I have crooked trees on my pasture lane in Maine that put more flavor in one scrub apple than Italy grows into a bushel.

We have driven over 4,000 miles in six countries before tackling the Brenner Pass to what lies beyond the Alps. In that distance we saw exactly one traffic accident, and that was in Belgium. Two bicyclists came together, and they were speaking with spirit to the policeman who was making notes on a little pad. Other than disruffled feelings, the damage was all to a loaf of bread one of the participants had on his handlebars. In this respect, loss was total. But we have been in Italy four days and we have seen five major traffic collisions involving automobiles, and I think I have figured out the reason, and solution.

It is the foolish toot. The law here is that when you wish to pass an automobile ahead you blink your left directional lights, toot your horn, and pass. Back home in Maine we used to have a law that was about like this. The law said if you tooted to pass the vehicle ahead must "yield the right of way." I heard lawyers cite this in court in days gone by. The law, of course, derived from the days of dirt roads when everybody drove up in the middle, and it didn't presume that the fellow on ahead was going to climb a tree or turn off in a bog to let you go by.

Since those days, Maine has advance to what we call the "last clear chance" philosophy. Whether you toot or not, whether you have the right or not, the courts tend to place the blame for a collision on the driver who had the last clear chance to avoid it. But in Italy they still regard the toot as the dominant note in the symphony of traffic. Here, they expect you to climb a tree or go off in the gulch.

If I could spell Italian or knew the present proconsul in Rome, I would write a letter, because this toot business is at least 40 years out of date. Blowing a horn is no aid to safe driving. And to the poor tourist, who is me, the constant din is a scourge upon the land. An Italian drives at 140-km. an hour and nobody toots at him. But I want to see the beauties of this incomparable country, and at 35 good American mph. I get nothing but toot, toot, toot.

Everybody passes me. The villa and the ruins mean nothing to an Italian - he wants to pass. I want to see the apple trees and the olive groves. So I am peeped, beeped, and tooted to a frenzy. I drive carefully. (Editor's Note - Gould has since escaped from Italy, and he did not have an incident or accident there, and he reports that he never touched his horn button once.) Gould resumes: The joker in this is rather nice. My car, although European - made, is equipped for American use. I have a horn that blats like a Holstein cow with her tail caught in the tie-up door. The Italian autos have a modest tootle that, individually, is small, although disturbing in the aggregate.

I have learned a marvelous thing about languages here in Italy. When I was a student I neglected Italian. My wife, who speaks only Maine and Boston, has done much better here than I have. She waves her hands, points, beckons, and makes odd noises, and comes up with things when I can't spin a thread. Today in the market place I got some apples, a bit of cheese, some apricot juice, and a cabbage. We had driven eight kilometres and stopped to have a roadside lunch, and we opened the bundle, and there was a cabbage. I did not buy a cabbage. I didn't even pay for a cabbage. If I were Abraham Lincoln I would drive back and return it. We gave it to a man directing traffic by some construction work. He thanked us and held up 37 automobiles so we could go through. My wife keeps saying that she can't speak any foreign tongue, but at least she never stole a cabbage. And I have to admit this is an academic fact. She seems to have the knack of communication.

It was fun to visit Virgil in Mantua. His statue makes him appear to be pondering a spondee, and I thought I heard an ictus or two. We paused in Assisi and in the market place saw dressed - out songbirds displayed for sale - a plain fact which can be assessed variously by him who pleases. Suumcuique, Garibaldi is looking fit. The riprap along the roads to Rome are of finest Parian marble. Or Lapis Lazuli. Yet there is an anti-climax to Italy for the student of the classics. The towns on yon distant hillside are not so lovely when you get to them - the Odes of Horace fit better than the masonry, the rivers are muddy, the tourist in Venice should either be a newlywed or have a vivid imagination. Gondolas with outboard motors? Veni, vidi, arrivederci.

Senate Has Fun With Women's Bill

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The Missouri Senate had a lot of fun today with a bill to set up a 15-member commission on the status of women.

In the midst of the quips, Sen. John E. Downs, D-St. Joseph, said the original mistake was made when men gave women the right to vote.

At that point the presiding officer introduced a group of 71 members of a Carroll County Women's Club. They were seated in the upper gallery right behind Downs, whose district includes Carroll County.

Downs looked over his shoulder and asked the chair to remind them of the rule against throwing things from the gallery.

The bill was finally advanced 18-6 after more hilarity. The bill would make statutory the present commission on the status of women appointed by the governor.

Bills to make mozarkite, a form of chert, the official state rock, and galena, which is lead ore, the official state mineral, also were advanced in the same humorous mood.

Altogether the Senate advanced seven bills on its heavy calendar before adjourning for the weekend. They included measures to:

Set up an election study commission to review Missouri's tangled election laws and report to the 1969 legislature.

Increase the number of boat commission employes from 15 to 25.

Let St. Louis use parking meter revenue to build a parking garage near Kiel Auditorium.

Raise the pay of St. Louis policemen at a cost of about $1.1 million a year, effective next February. Lower ranks would get an 8 per cent increase and officers above sergeant would get 6 per cent more.

New Bogart Cult Springs Up in Younger Generation

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — The late Humphrey Bogart has become the center of a cult, most of whose members are so young they can only have seen his films in their endless television reruns or in revivals.

Joe Hyams, a former Hollywood newspaperman and author of a book, "Bogart," believes that he understands why Bogart is popular today with fans young enough to be his children.

"Bogart was always cool and loose, the way they'd like to be," he said. "His voice was a rasp and he even had a lisp, but he was tough outside while there was something warm inside. He may be partly father image, but there's also something about him that they can identify with."

Hyams served as production consultant for "Bogart," a documentary about the actor which will be broadcast on ABC next Sunday and found the assignment presented problems unknown to a book author but also revealed facets of his subject that literary research left concealed.

Hyams found himself watching endless hours of old films.

"It was fascinating to watch him develop," he said. "He always had a natural way of taking a woman in his arms, but it became smoother."

Hyams also observed that in their many films together both Bogart and James Cagney invariably wound up repeating almost identical closing lines and even wore clothes they had used in earlier films.

Except for Cary Grant and perhaps a couple of others, Hyams thinks that film stars don't come in Bogart's dimensions today.

The six McLendon radio stations served formal notice on the music industry Wednesday by advertisements in trade journals that they were tired of records with "raunchy" lyrics and tired of complaints from listeners.

Starting May 15, the stations will refuse to consider playing any record submitted without a printed copy of the lyrics.

Gordon B. McLendon, president of the chain, said he was "disturbed at the lyrics and sounds of many records popular with the youth of America.

on cigarette smoking and heart disease
Q Whether or not you've smoked a long time, do your risks go down when you quit?
A YES. The death rate from heart attack decreases among those who give up cigarette smoking, until it is close to the death rate of people who have never smoked. When you stop smoking, some body tissues that have been damaged — such as in the lungs or bronchial tubes —gradually return toward normal.

The POWER of FAITH

By WOODI ISHMAEL

VIETNAM CHAPLAINS, PART I

Major Pham-Minh-Hú'a is the parachute jumping Chief of Catholic Chaplains for the Vietnam Air Force.

Father Hú'a, a fifth generation Catholic, has found his entire life sustained by the power of faith. Born and raised in a small town south of Hanoi in North Vietnam, Father Hú'a studied for the priesthood at Saint Sulpice Seminary in Hanoi and Bhat-Bien Seminary. But in 1954 he realized what the future held in the north. He, with his two brothers and three sisters made their way south to Saigon.

For the past ten years he has been a military chaplain and the past four years have been with the Air Force. Father Hú'a not only ministers to the spiritual needs of Vietnamese Catholics, but others. Even American G.I.s go to him for spiritual direction and help. When he parachutes into an area where he is needed, race, creed or color make no difference.

Father Hú'a is dedicated also to promoting his country's future. He is a commissioner and district leader of the Boy Scouts in Vietnam, and spends much of his energy furthering the aims of Scouting.

"We do not have to give up our cultural and historical heritage as an Oriental to be a Christian", says Father Hú'a, "for with the best of both the combination is good."

The Church and Air Pollution

What is the spiritual atmosphere you are breathing? Quite a bit has been written recently about air pollution but quite apart from the physical environment our life context can be stale and stifling when we have not cleared the air with prayer, worship, and a renewed awareness of the presence of the living God in His love. We feel you might find the atmosphere at Trinity Baptist Church refreshing and would invite you to visit with us Sunday at 110 E. Center Street. Also, when you have time take a drive out on Highway 61 to the north edge of town and see our new building under construction.

Sincerely

Economy Shows Steady Growth in Bootheel

JEFFERSON CITY -- The economy has been showing steady growth in Southeast Missouri, the Missouri state division of commerce and industrial development, reports. However, there have been temporary setbacks. Approximately 375 employes are involved in a temporary two - month shutdown of Marquette Cement company in Cape Girardeau. Fifty employes may be affected by a partial closing of a sports specialty factory in Chaffee. High inventories are responsible.

The 1966 crop season was plagued with seasonal problems, but overall it was a good year. Although the cotton crop was 43 per cent below 1965, there was little drop in farm income with the substitution of soybeans. Both wheat and soybeans set new records. The change in the 1967 feed grain program allows more acres to be planted and makes the future outlook good.

The number of housing permits reached a post war low for the district. An easing of credit policy is underway but will take some time before home building industries rebound.

Large projects are authorized or underway in district cities. Cape Girardeau projects include a $600,000 building for KFVS television and radio, $1,400,000 federal building, $775,000 vocational high school, and additional facilities for the college. Poplar Bluff has a $400,000 mental retardation clinic and a $300,000 improvement in the city utilities scheduled for 1967. Sikeston will also build a $400,000 mental retardation clinic and is adding a new industries--Schevelle Home Manufacturing company. Educational and medical construction needs will provide additional stimulus in the district.

The positive factors for consideration are: new and expanded industries coming to the area, planned commercial construction, federal grants, agricultural production prospects high and a continued high level of employment. The uncertainties are: amount of credit easing for residential construction, inventory control, Viet Nam war involvement and tax increases. These factors balance to indicate continuation of business growth at a slow steady pace.

In Charleston bank deposits rose 20.7 per cent in October, November and December of 1966 over the same quarter in 1965 from $14,450,600 and $17,448,400; postal receipts declined 2.2 per cent from $21,900 to $21,400; electric current(kilowatt hours) climbed 1.6 per cent from 4,076,700 to 4,142,800; telephones in service from 2,228 to 3,371. a 4.4 per cent gain; gas meters in service from 1,504 to 1,550, up 3 per cent.

Residential building permits in Charleston for the same comparable periods rose 115.5 per cent from $24,500 to $52,500; total commercial permits in the 1966 quarter $3 million, none in 1965.

Chinese Lose Favor in Indonesia

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — Communist China, once Indonesia's great friend and ally, has become a symbol of hate here, and the million or so Chinese aliens in this country are feeling the effects.

An officially sponsored anti-Peking line has combined with traditional anti - Chinese sentiments among Indonesia's Moslem people to create an atmosphere of tension for the Chinese.

This situation developed following the 1965 coup d'etat attempt organized by the pro-Peking Indonesian Communist party, PKI. Communist China was accused of having a hand in it.

The coup was smashed by army forces led by Gen. Suharto, now acting president. The collapse of the Red movement triggered a massive anti-Communist campaign throughout Indonesia in which hundreds of thousands were slain. The PKI was destroyed and its remnants were driven underground.

Since then, Chinese aliens, most of whom owe their allegiance to Peking, have become virtually equated with Communists.

Stern regulations limit the activities of Chinese and subject them to special taxation. They have been banned from trading, their chief livelihood, in such outlying areas as Sumatra. In Jakarta they have been denied permanent residence.

Boycott of Chinese goods is being fostered and Chinese-owned shops are liable to closure by the military.

Peking has been linked with the distribution here of pamphlets in Chinese characters, urging local Chinese to resist the Suharto government.

Accounts of Peking's tirades against Suharto's "new order," labeling it reactionary and fascist, are carried by the official news agency Antara and reprinted in newspapers.

Reports of Red Guard extremism, particularly against Chinese Moslems, are used by Moslem groups here to warn against communism.

Diplomatic relations with Peking are close to the snapping point. There are demands from militantly anti-Communist student and Moslem organizations that the last threads be cut.

Foreign Minister Adam Malik has indicated that the ties will continue at least until a settlement has been reached on the question of repatriating Chinese who want to go back to the mainland.

"What do we do with one million Chinese?" Malik has asked.

When those Chinese who want to leave finally go, they are not likely to be allowed to take much with them.

One military official commented recently:

"Long ago the Chinese came to Indonesia emptyhanded and nobody had invited them to come. They should leave as they came."

PRODUCE PURCHASES
By WOOLWORTH'S
SETS NEW RECORD

The amount of pork and poultry purchased by the F. W. Woolworth Co. from Missouri and other poultry and pork producing areas during 1966 reached a new record for the sixth straight year.

The company purchased more than 6,075,000 pounds of poultry and 2,760,000 pounds of pork during 1966, said H. W. Bode, vice president of restaurant operations from the variety and department store chain.

Pointing out that it is a policy of Woolworth's to buy locally where possible, he said, "this policy benefits not only local wholesalers and retailers but many others in the state employed in production and distribution."

Mr. Bode noted that Woolworth's now serves in all 50 states more than one million people each day through 1,754 luncheonettes, 13 in-store cafeterias, 13 Harvest House cafeterias with stores, and 8 free-standing Harvest House restaurants. These facilities can seat 93,836 persons at one time, he said. Indicative of the size of the company's food operations are these totals of items served last year: 19,-turkey dinners, 6,950,000 pieces of apple pie, and over 133 million cups of coffee.

The Woolworth executive predicted that purchases would increase during 1967 because of the anticipated increase in consumer spending and a continuation of the company's expansion program.

"We plan to open 37 new restaurant facilities during the coming year, as well as enlarge and remodel others," he said.

A youngster, lunching with his mother, told her that his new teacher is "mean, but fair." "How's that?" asked his mother. "Oh, she's mean to everyone."

The Dominant Note

BY JOHN GOULD
in the Christian Science Monitor
Rivoli, Italy
All Saints Day, 1966

Italy grows some of the most beautiful apples I've ever seen, but the flavor is a lot like a 10-cent sawdust baseball. I grow apples in Maine, and Maine grows about as many as Italy, and the difference is as great as their distance apart.

The market places abound in beautiful fruit, and I am gorging on delicacies truly not found in our markets at home. But the apples of Italy prove that beauty really is only skin deep, and I have crooked trees on my pasture lane in Maine that put more flavor in one scrub apple than Italy grows into a bushel.

We have driven over 4,000 miles in six countries before tackling the Brenner Pass to what lies beyond the Alps. In that distance we saw exactly one traffic accident, and that was in Belgium. Two bicyclists came together, and they were speaking with spirit to the policeman who was making notes on a little pad. Other than disruffled feelings, the damage was all to a loaf of bread one of the participants had on his handlebars. In this respect, loss was total. But we have been in Italy four days and we have seen five major traffic collisions involving automobiles, and I think I have figured out the reason, and solution.

It is the foolish toot. The law here is that when you wish to pass an automobile ahead you blink your left directional lights, toot your horn, and pass. Back home in Maine we used to have a law that was about like this. The law said if you tooted to pass the vehicle ahead must "yield the right of way." I heard lawyers cite this in court in days gone by. The law, of course, derived from the days of dirt roads when everybody drove up in the middle, and it didn't presume that the fellow on ahead was going to climb a tree or turn off in a bog to let you go by.

Since those days, Maine has advance to what we call the "last clear chance" philosophy. Whether you toot or not, whether you have the right or not, the courts tend to place the blame for a collision on the driver who had the last clear chance to avoid it. But in Italy they still regard the toot as the dominant note in the symphony of traffic. Here, they expect you to climb a tree or go off in the gulch.

If I could spell Italian or knew the present proconsul in Rome, I would write a letter, because this toot business is at least 40 years out of date. Blowing a horn is no aid to safe driving. And to the poor tourist, who is me, the constant din is a scourge upon the land. An Italian drives at 140-km. an hour and nobody toots at him. But I want to see the beauties of this incomparable country, and at 35 good American mph. I get nothing but toot, toot, toot.

Everybody passes me. The villa and the ruins mean nothing to an Italian - he wants to pass. I want to see the apple trees and the olive groves. So I am peeped, beeped, and tooted to a frenzy. I drive carefully. (Editor's Note - Gould has since escaped from Italy, and he did not have an incident or accident there, and he reports that he never touched his horn button once.) Gould resumes: The joker in this is rather nice. My car, although European - made, is equipped for American use. I have a horn that blats like a Holstein cow with her tail caught in the tie-up door. The Italian autos have a modest tootle that, individually, is small, although disturbing in the aggregate.

I have learned a marvelous thing about languages here in Italy. When I was a student I neglected Italian. My wife, who speaks only Maine and Boston, has done much better here than I have. She waves her hands, points, beckons, and makes odd noises, and comes up with things when I can't spin a thread. Today in the market place I got some apples, a bit of cheese, some apricot juice, and a cabbage. We had driven eight kilometres and stopped to have a roadside lunch, and we opened the bundle, and there was a cabbage. I did not buy a cabbage. I didn't even pay for a cabbage. If I were Abraham Lincoln I would drive back and return it. We gave it to a man directing traffic by some construction work. He thanked us and held up 37 automobiles so we could go through. My wife keeps saying that she can't speak any foreign tongue, but at least she never stole a cabbage. And I have to admit this is an academic fact. She seems to have the knack of communication.

It was fun to visit Virgil in Mantua. His statue makes him appear to be pondering a spondee, and I thought I heard an ictus or two. We paused in Assisi and in the market place saw dressed - out songbirds displayed for sale - a plain fact which can be assessed variously by him who pleases. Suumcuique, Garibaldi is looking fit. The riprap along the roads to Rome are of finest Parian marble. Or Lapis Lazuli. Yet there is an anti-climax to Italy for the student of the classics. The towns on yon distant hillside are not so lovely when you get to them - the Odes of Horace fit better than the masonry, the rivers are muddy, the tourist in Venice should either be a newlywed or have a vivid imagination. Gondolas with outboard motors? Veni, vidi, arrivederci.

Senate Has Fun With Women's Bill

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The Missouri Senate had a lot of fun today with a bill to set up a 15-member commission on the status of women.

In the midst of the quips, Sen. John E. Downs, D-St. Joseph, said the original mistake was made when men gave women the right to vote.

At that point the presiding officer introduced a group of 71 members of a Carroll County Women's Club. They were seated in the upper gallery right behind Downs, whose district includes Carroll County.

Downs looked over his shoulder and asked the chair to remind them of the rule against throwing things from the gallery.

The bill was finally advanced 18-6 after more hilarity. The bill would make statutory the present commission on the status of women appointed by the governor.

Bills to make mozarkite, a form of chert, the official state rock, and galena, which is lead ore, the official state mineral, also were advanced in the same humorous mood.

Altogether the Senate advanced seven bills on its heavy calendar before adjourning for the weekend. They included measures to:

Set up an election study commission to review Missouri's tangled election laws and report to the 1969 legislature.

Increase the number of boat commission employes from 15 to 25.

Let St. Louis use parking meter revenue to build a parking garage near Kiel Auditorium.

Raise the pay of St. Louis policemen at a cost of about $1.1 million a year, effective next February. Lower ranks would get an 8 per cent increase and officers above sergeant would get 6 per cent more.

New Bogart Cult Springs Up in Younger Generation

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — The late Humphrey Bogart has become the center of a cult, most of whose members are so young they can only have seen his films in their endless television reruns or in revivals.

Joe Hyams, a former Hollywood newspaperman and author of a book, "Bogart," believes that he understands why Bogart is popular today with fans young enough to be his children.

"Bogart was always cool and loose, the way they'd like to be," he said. "His voice was a rasp and he even had a lisp, but he was tough outside while there was something warm inside. He may be partly father image, but there's also something about him that they can identify with."

Hyams served as production consultant for "Bogart," a documentary about the actor which will be broadcast on ABC next Sunday and found the assignment presented problems unknown to a book author but also revealed facets of his subject that literary research left concealed.

Hyams found himself watching endless hours of old films.

"It was fascinating to watch him develop," he said. "He always had a natural way of taking a woman in his arms, but it became smoother."

Hyams also observed that in their many films together both Bogart and James Cagney invariably wound up repeating almost identical closing lines and even wore clothes they had used in earlier films.

Except for Cary Grant and perhaps a couple of others, Hyams thinks that film stars don't come in Bogart's dimensions today.

The six McLendon radio stations served formal notice on the music industry Wednesday by advertisements in trade journals that they were tired of records with "raunchy" lyrics and tired of complaints from listeners.

Starting May 15, the stations will refuse to consider playing any record submitted without a printed copy of the lyrics.

Q&A
on cigarette smoking and heart disease
Q Whether or not you've smoked a long time, do your risks go down when you quit?
A YES. The death rate from heart attack decreases among those who give up cigarette smoking, until it is close to the death rate of people who have never smoked. When you stop smoking, some body tissues that have been damaged — such as in the lungs or bronchial tubes —gradually return toward normal.

The POWER of FAITH

VIETNAM CHAPLAINS, PART I

Major Pham-Minh-Hú'a is the parachute jumping Chief of Catholic Chaplains for the Vietnam Air Force.

Father Hú'a, a fifth generation Catholic, has found his entire life sustained by the power of faith. Born and raised in a small town south of Hanoi in North Vietnam, Father Hú'a studied for the priesthood at Saint Sulpice Seminary in Hanoi and Bhat-Bien Seminary. But in 1954 he realized what the future held in the north. He, with his two brothers and three sisters made their way south to Saigon.

For the past ten years he has been a military chaplain and the past four years have been with the Air Force. Father Hú'a not only ministers to the spiritual needs of Vietnamese Catholics, but others. Even American G.I.s go to him for spiritual direction and help. When he parachutes into an area where he is needed, race, creed or color make no difference.

Father Hú'a is dedicated also to promoting his country's future. He is a commissioner and district leader of the Boy Scouts in Vietnam, and spends much of his energy furthering the aims of Scouting.

"We do not have to give up our cultural and historical heritage as an Oriental to be a Christian", says Father Hú'a, "for with the best of both the combination is good."

COLLEGE EDUCATION FUNDS - TAX - FREE THROUGH U. S. SAVINGS BONDS.....

U. S. Savings Bonds are bought and held for many reasons -- both personal and patriotic. One purely practical reason is tax advantage -- especially attractive when E Bonds are purchased to create "tax - free" college - education funds.

E Bonds may be registered in the child's name, with a parent or the purchaser as beneficiary (but not as a co-owner). At the end of the first year of Bond purchasers, a Federal income - tax return is filed in the name of the child, listing the increase in Bond value (interest) as income to the child.

Filing this one return establishes "intent", and no further returns need to be filed to prove intent, as long as Bond interest, plus other income, comes to less than $600. No tax is due until the income exceeds $900.

Thus, when the child's Bonds are redeemed to meet college costs, the accrued interest is free from income tax. A copy of the tax return filed the first year should be retained as proof of intent.

Tax savings can be realized another way. Simply wait until the child begins to cash the Bonds to pay college expenses. The youngster then files his or her own tax return each year, reporting the full amount of interest on redeemed Bonds as income. If that interest, plus any other income, totals less than $900, no tax is owed at all.

Remember, however, that this tax advantage applies only to Bonds registered in the child's name as owner -- the coownership form of registration may not be used for such purpose (unless the child's own funds are used in the purchase).

SPRINGTIME'S

DOGWOOD BLOSSOMS

The flowering dogwood is probably the most welcome blossom in America. When it appears we all know that springtime has arrived. Blooming early in the spring before the leaves appear, the blossom is really a tiny cluster of flowers surrounded by four white leaves that only look like petals.

Whether we are looking at leaves or blossoms — it is still America's most beautiful sight in early spring.

Flowers or potted plants are always most welcome to a shut-in, and sending them is a very special way to say, "Get well soon." Call GR1- 5777 we'll deliver them.

Banquet Honors Top Students

MATTHEWS -- The Rev. James Hackney, pastor of the First Baptist church at Sikeston, addressed the Matthews R-5 high school honor roll students and their parents at the annual dinner sponsored by the Parent-Teacher Association Tuesday evening.

He listed as requirements for a successful life a sense of purpose or destiny, duty, preparation and a devotion to God.

The moral tone of a nation, he emphasized, is set by the training given in the home, school and church. In conclusion he urged the students to think life through and to adhere to the standards set by God.

Joe Buchanan, president of the student council, served as toastmaster and the invocation was given by Mike Geske. About 150 attended the dinner prepared by school cafeteria personnel, with assistance in serving from PTA mothers and girls from the home economics classes.

Tables were decorated with placemats in green and white printed with the recipe for a good school. White carnations, yellow chrysanthemums and sprigs of fern centered the tables at intervals with a large floral arrangement at the speakers table.

Roll call of classes was made by the highest ranking student in each class and presentation of honor certificates was made by Principal Benton B. Conrad.

Receiving the merit award "M" for scholastic achievement were:

THIS WEEK SALUTING

St. Francis Xavier Church

CHRISTENDOM

The title of the article describes in a word the world of Christianity. The almost fantastic Western Civilization of our day owes a great deal of its greatness to the early Christian world. Some of us like to think that we were singularly blessed by God to the exclusion of other peoples. This of course is not true. We are all of us blessed by God in that we are all of us created in His Image. But it was the early Church that developed this image of God in us. Christ sent His Apostles, "To preach and teach all nations." The pilgrim Church was not content to remain static and to occupy only the western shores of the Mediterranean Sea. It moved into the structure of the Roman Empire. It was a drastic change for the Romans. They were Pagan and Hedonistic. Christianity was and is Monotheistic and its philosophy is best summed up in the words of its Founder, "This commandment I give you that you love one another. If your enemy strike your right cheek turn the other side. Do good to them who hate you." The mystique of the doctrine seemed to seize the people and many not content with living up to the doctrine of Christ now began to take the direction given to the young man of the Gospel story, "Go sell what thou hast, give to the poor and follow me." And the Age of Monasticism began. The theme of the times began to be what St. Augustine later called in his, "The City of God," "We have no other existence than for God."

This motivation carried men into the north of Europe where they won the fierce tribes into the gentleness of the imitation of Christ. Boniface, the apostle to the Germans, Sts. Cyril and Methodius who won over the slaves to Christianity, St. Patrick who went to Ireland to sew the seed that was for the sixteen following centuries to bear so much fruit. As these and the numberless others of their like went, they established their monastic schools which were the forerunner of the great universities that were to follow and to move into the second millenium and the thirteenth century, the golden one, that rivaled in learning and achievement in the arts and sciences even the great century in which we now dwell. As the monasteries were established the people moved around them for the purpose of the education of their children. Hence the beginning of the cities and the gradual migration of the people from the land. This brought about the problems that are inherent in the crowding of cities. The growth of the cities brought about the establishment of the Guilds which organized the crafts. It provided for the education of young men in the crafts which were the manufacturing beginnings as we know it today. The journeymen after they had learned their trades from the Masters traveled to other cities. This opened up the communications and spread the fruits of the learning. I mention these things to show the growth of a civilization which, a few hundred years later, brought its abilities and its culture and know-how to our own land.

It is a matter of the history of the growth of education in America that it was fostered entirely in the early colonial days by the several churches that had established colonies in the new land. It was their ministers who were the schools first teachers and on the college level it saw the establishment of Yale, Harvard, William and Mary, Dartmouth, University of Pennsylvania and Georgetown in Washington, DC. Even before the War for Independence from Great Britain. The public school system as we have it today did not function until after the War between the States. In the mean time it was the churches that maintained the schools especially for the teachers, that enabled the public schools to have a source for its need of teachers. This was in fulfillment of the command of Christ to His Apostles, to preach, but not just that but as well to teach, and not just a few, or the elect or the chosen but all peoples. If we are looking for the fountainhead of Democracy, herein we can find it.

Similarly, in the very early days of Christ's Public Life, in The Sermon on the Mount, Christ tells the teachers of the Law, I have not come to change the Law but to give knowledge of it. So too His Church immediately, even though it was oppressed and suppressed by the Roman Empire urged its people to obey the King to keep the Law. St. Paul in his letter to Peter who has been especially abused by the government of Rome, urges him to constancy, telling of Christ, that, "He was abused but did not abuse in return. When He suffered, He did not threaten, but he entrusted Himself to Him who judges justly." Many historians writing about this amazing growth of Christianity in such a climate of opposition point out that it was this very imitation of the gentle Christ, which won over the Romans and caused them to say in admiration, "See the Christians how they love one another.

To say that Christianity always maintained this way of life is to give a lie to the history of Europe and the Western Hemisphere. For though its Founder was divine, His followers were of flesh and blood and subject to all the shortcomings that the flesh is heir to. But there have been enough of His followers to keep the Faith and like most of us all, to at least want to follow in His way that the world essentially is good. I shudder to think what it would be today if He had not brought the Light into the world.

COLLEGE EDUCATION FUNDS - TAX - FREE THROUGH U. S. SAVINGS BONDS.....

U. S. Savings Bonds are bought and held for many reasons -- both personal and patriotic. One purely practical reason is tax advantage -- especially attractive when E Bonds are purchased to create "tax - free" college - education funds.

E Bonds may be registered in the child's name, with a parent or the purchaser as beneficiary (but not as a co-owner). At the end of the first year of Bond purchasers, a Federal income - tax return is filed in the name of the child, listing the increase in Bond value (interest) as income to the child.

Filing this one return establishes "intent", and no further returns need to be filed to prove intent, as long as Bond interest, plus other income, comes to less than $600. No tax is due until the income exceeds $900.

Thus, when the child's Bonds are redeemed to meet college costs, the accrued interest is free from income tax. A copy of the tax return filed the first year should be retained as proof of intent.

Tax savings can be realized another way. Simply wait until the child begins to cash the Bonds to pay college expenses. The youngster then files his or her own tax return each year, reporting the full amount of interest on redeemed Bonds as income. If that interest, plus any other income, totals less than $900, no tax is owed at all.

Remember, however, that this tax advantage applies only to Bonds registered in the child's name as owner -- the coownership form of registration may not be used for such purpose (unless the child's own funds are used in the purchase).

SPRINGTIME'S

DOGWOOD BLOSSOMS

The flowering dogwood is probably the most welcome blossom in America. When it appears we all know that springtime has arrived. Blooming early in the spring before the leaves appear, the blossom is really a tiny cluster of flowers surrounded by four white leaves that only look like petals.

Whether we are looking at leaves or blossoms — it is still America's most beautiful sight in early spring.

Flowers or potted plants are always most welcome to a shut-in, and sending them is a very special way to say, "Get well soon." Call GR1- 5777 we'll deliver them.

Banquet Honors Top Students

MATTHEWS -- The Rev. James Hackney, pastor of the First Baptist church at Sikeston, addressed the Matthews R-5 high school honor roll students and their parents at the annual dinner sponsored by the Parent-Teacher Association Tuesday evening.

He listed as requirements for a successful life a sense of purpose or destiny, duty, preparation and a devotion to God.

The moral tone of a nation, he emphasized, is set by the training given in the home, school and church. In conclusion he urged the students to think life through and to adhere to the standards set by God.

Joe Buchanan, president of the student council, served as toastmaster and the invocation was given by Mike Geske. About 150 attended the dinner prepared by school cafeteria personnel, with assistance in serving from PTA mothers and girls from the home economics classes.

Tables were decorated with placemats in green and white printed with the recipe for a good school. White carnations, yellow chrysanthemums and sprigs of fern centered the tables at intervals with a large floral arrangement at the speakers table.

Roll call of classes was made by the highest ranking student in each class and presentation of honor certificates was made by Principal Benton B. Conrad.

Receiving the merit award "M" for scholastic achievement were:

Eighth Grade: Jan Lea Helms, Brenda King, Harold Malloy, Nancy Cain; Deborah Bell, Danny Griffin, Jeannie Wummers.

Sophomores: Terry Lape, Jackie Hoggatt, Linda Bird, Ronald Atwill, Janet Curtner, Rosanna Gammill, Jerry McCoy.

Juniors: Willard Gruen, Connie Griffin, Shirley Thurman, Pat McMillen, Mike Geske, Janet Byerly, Paul Lomax, Amon Ring, Sharon Huffstutler, Wanda Farrenburg.

Seniors: Charles Conrad, John Slayton, James Thurman, Joe Buchanan, Peggy Lathum, Jeanice Griffin, Danny Lape, Kathryn Sue Morris, Judy Daniels, Sue DeWitt, Paula Huffstutler, David Schneider, Linda K. Bledsoe, Dorothy Rhyne, Garry Harris, Charles Brooks.

#39 In A Series To Acquaint You With The Churches In This Area.

THIS WEEK SALUTING

St. Francis Xavier Church

CHRISTENDOM

The title of the article describes in a word the world of Christianity. The almost fantastic Western Civilization of our day owes a great deal of its greatness to the early Christian world. Some of us like to think that we were singularly blessed by God to the exclusion of other peoples. This of course is not true. We are all of us blessed by God in that we are all of us created in His Image. But it was the early Church that developed this image of God in us. Christ sent His Apostles, "To preach and teach all nations." The pilgrim Church was not content to remain static and to occupy only the western shores of the Mediterranean Sea. It moved into the structure of the Roman Empire. It was a drastic change for the Romans. They were Pagan and Hedonistic. Christianity was and is Monotheistic and its philosophy is best summed up in the words of its Founder, "This commandment I give you that you love one another. If your enemy strike your right cheek turn the other side. Do good to them who hate you." The mystique of the doctrine seemed to seize the people and many not content with living up to the doctrine of Christ now began to take the direction given to the young man of the Gospel story, "Go sell what thou hast, give to the poor and follow me." And the Age of Monasticism began. The theme of the times began to be what St. Augustine later called in his, "The City of God," "We have no other existence than for God."

This motivation carried men into the north of Europe where they won the fierce tribes into the gentleness of the imitation of Christ. Boniface, the apostle to the Germans, Sts. Cyril and Methodius who won over the slaves to Christianity, St. Patrick who went to Ireland to sew the seed that was for the sixteen following centuries to bear so much fruit. As these and the numberless others of their like went, they established their monastic schools which were the forerunner of the great universities that were to follow and to move into the second millenium and the thirteenth century, the golden one, that rivaled in learning and achievement in the arts and sciences even the great century in which we now dwell. As the monasteries were established the people moved around them for the purpose of the education of their children. Hence the beginning of the cities and the gradual migration of the people from the land. This brought about the problems that are inherent in the crowding of cities. The growth of the cities brought about the establishment of the Guilds which organized the crafts. It provided for the education of young men in the crafts which were the manufacturing beginnings as we know it today. The journeymen after they had learned their trades from the Masters traveled to other cities. This opened up the communications and spread the fruits of the learning. I mention these things to show the growth of a civilization which, a few hundred years later, brought its abilities and its culture and know-how to our own land.

It is a matter of the history of the growth of education in America that it was fostered entirely in the early colonial days by the several churches that had established colonies in the new land. It was their ministers who were the schools first teachers and on the college level it saw the establishment of Yale, Harvard, William and Mary, Dartmouth, University of Pennsylvania and Georgetown in Washington, DC. Even before the War for Independence from Great Britain. The public school system as we have it today did not function until after the War between the States. In the mean time it was the churches that maintained the schools especially for the teachers, that enabled the public schools to have a source for its need of teachers. This was in fulfillment of the command of Christ to His Apostles, to preach, but not just that but as well to teach, and not just a few, or the elect or the chosen but all peoples. If we are looking for the fountainhead of Democracy, herein we can find it.

Similarly, in the very early days of Christ's Public Life, in The Sermon on the Mount, Christ tells the teachers of the Law, I have not come to change the Law but to give knowledge of it. So too His Church immediately, even though it was oppressed and suppressed by the Roman Empire urged its people to obey the King to keep the Law. St. Paul in his letter to Peter who has been especially abused by the government of Rome, urges him to constancy, telling of Christ, that, "He was abused but did not abuse in return. When He suffered, He did not threaten, but he entrusted Himself to Him who judges justly." Many historians writing about this amazing growth of Christianity in such a climate of opposition point out that it was this very imitation of the gentle Christ, which won over the Romans and caused them to say in admiration, "See the Christians how they love one another.

To say that Christianity always maintained this way of life is to give a lie to the history of Europe and the Western Hemisphere. For though its Founder was divine, His followers were of flesh and blood and subject to all the shortcomings that the flesh is heir to. But there have been enough of His followers to keep the Faith and like most of us all, to at least want to follow in His way that the world essentially is good. I shudder to think what it would be today if He had not brought the Light into the world.

Time To Begin New Road Toward Peace For Nation

WHAT HAS BECOME of the dove who carried an olive branch? Did this symbol ever exist or were there always eagles who appeared dangerous and stately and always forboding hammers and sickles. Peace, peace, where have you flown?

Through war our ancestors have dealt blow after blow for peace. They have attempted to force one another to live in harmony. Always one battle after another. The American Revolution, the Civil War, World War I, World War II, the Korean War, the war in Viet Nam, and all those wars before and all the wars which could follow.

Where have we been? Where are we going? Have wars ever accomplished anything? This question can certainly be debated. As one looks at history, he can certainly see wars caused by wars before him.

Can the vicious cycle ever be broken? Are we ever to find a world in which people can break away from greed and selfishness? Will there ever be a day when we can see our own shortcomings and accept those of others?

It is time that we recognize how petty humanity is and attempt to remedy the situation. It is our responsibility to halt the march toward destruction and change our attitudes and values. We should be citizens of the world, working for the common good of all.

We, the adults of tomorrow, can make the foundations of a road to real peace, and some day when the road is completed and leads directly to a promised land of peace, our posterity may glance upward and see a dove drifting above them with an olive branch in its beak. Then, perhaps, in the wind we will hear a murmured prayer of thanks, and know we started a job that on completion was well done.

----------Darla Scoles.

Students Organize Time For More Efficient Work

HAS ANYONE EVER wondered at the close of a day where the hours of that day slipped?

Although one lives and experiences every hour of each day, he may look back and wonder what he accomplished. The hours may have passed by without complete utilization.

All the plans made for that day may have passed unfulfilled, and one will never be able to bring back those wasted hours. They are gone and completely unattainable for any further use.

With graduation for seniors and the end of a school year for underclassmen close at hand, it is even more important for everyone to make the most of the time that is left to bring up the final grades for this school year.

Best way for anyone to do this is to learn to organize one's time for doing homework with consideration allowed for the extra-curricular activities of that day.

Organizing time is extremely difficult for many people. They wait to perform the difficult tasks until the last minute, usually meeting the required deadlines in haste and in a haphazard manner.

Last minute preparation is more difficult, worrisome and frequently inefficient.

Examinations in various classes are sometimes prepared at the last minute. Class reports barely meet the deadline as they are prepared hurriedly the night before -- with such a delay, one often panics, and the quality of any project is depreciated and ends with a low grade.

If during the week days, life becomes more hectic than planned and assignments pile up with more to do than time will allow, use the extra time on week ends and holidays to push the crisis away and make the days more sunny and bright.

At today's fast moving pace, a person has more tasks to do than there are hours in the day, and it is imperative that everyone organize his daily schedule and lead a richer life with more time for relaxation. ------Cheryl Hurley.

Seven Juniors Attend Girls State

SEVEN OUTSTANDING JUNIOR GIRLS chosen for the 26th annual Girls State are (standing) Sheila Topp and Lynne Tenkhoff, (seated) Randy Wolferding, Diane Taylor, Mary Jane Cope, and Linda Estes. Marjean Brown was not present when the picture was snapped.

Local Groups Will Sponsor Select Girls

Seven junior girls have been selected to represent Sikeston high school in the 26th annual session of Missouri Girls State on the campus of Stephens College June 18-24.

Girls chosen were Marjean Brown, Mary Jane Cope, Linda Estes, Diane Taylor, Lynne Tenkhoff, Sheila Topp, and Randy Wolferding.

Girls State is for the purpose of educating the country's youth in the duties, privileges, rights, and responsibilities of American citizenship.

Girls will attend classes, assemblies, and briefings concerning city, state, and county government.

Six hundred and twelve girls will attend this year's sessions. Two girls will be selected from the citizens of Girls State for outstanding all around citizenship to attend Girls Nation in Washington, D.C.

Other highlights of the week will be the divisional elections with the inauguration of the state officials on Thursday evening.

Girls State is sponsored by the American Legion Auxiliary and various civic groups in town. Mrs. Carl Elam is the local director for Girls State.

Bob Crawford Is Speaker During DE-COE Banquet

STEVE STEWART presents BOB CRAWFORD a pen and pencil set.

Bob Crawford, executive vice-prsident of the Missouri Retailers' Association of Jefferson City, spoke on subject, "Sikeston 2,000 A.D.," for the annual distributive education and cooperative occupational education classes joint banquet Thursday evening.

* * *

Bob Crawford served as Secretary of State of Missouri under the late Governor Blair, and he presently lives in Jefferson City.

Senior Steve Stewart was the master of ceremonies for the evening, and Ted Wagoner offered the invocation.

Introduction of the school board and business representatives was made by Bill Bye.

Banquet was held at the Holiday Inn and was in honor of the employers.

Each employer was presented a certificate of appreciation for his cooperation with the program.

In the program students attend school part of the day and work the second half of the day.

Distributive education students and the cooperative occupational education students presented Mr. Crawford with a pen and pencil set.

Norman Woods is the sponsor of both classes.

Students Aid In Producing 'South Pacific'

Several students have joined with teachers and student teachers to work toward the success of the Sikeston Little Theatre production of "South Pacific" to be presented tonight in the middle school auditorium at 8 o'clock.

Doug Morrison, student teacher under Robert Walker, displays various dramatic, singing and dancing abilities in one of the male leads in the play.

Jerry Smithers, student teacher for Mrs. Catherine Matthews, joins students Bill Lashmet, John Hough, Danny Cannon, and John Tidwell in a song and dance chorus.

Greer Huff plays one of the female nurses on the "South Pacific" isle. Sheila Topp appears as assistant to the native woman, Bloody Mary.

Miss Jean Love, art instructor, Ernest Elledge and Harley Barnes, principals of the middle school, and W. W. Wilkison, coordinator of math and science in the Sikeston public schools, work behind the scenes to add to the success of the play.

Working on make up are students Pat McMullin and Darla Scoles.

Various people are working on properties for the play. A few of the students are Paul Elledge, Jim Doggett, Sheila Topp, Mark Foster, Pam Marsh, Nancy Hazel, Janie Rhodes, Danny Cannon, and John Hough.

Barker staffers wish the members of the cast and crew of "South Pacific" great success on the opening night!

Sidwell, Wiss Will Compete For School's Top Leader

Students campaigning for the office of student body president in Sikeston high school for next school year are King Sidwell and Gary Wiss.

Juniors seeking the office of the vice-president are Eddie Felker, Mike Musick, and Ken Woodward.

Election for the student body leaders is scheduled for next Thursday in the cafetorium.

Polls will open at the beginning of the first lunch shift and close at the end of the third shift.

Danny Cannon Is Active In Varied SHS Activities

by Bill Marsh

Senior Danny Cannon has been an athletic manager in the Sikeston public schools for the past five years. He has been head manager for the track squad for the past three years, and he served the football team the last two years.

Danny recently received the highest scout honor, the Eagle Award, from General Lewis B. Hershey at the Southeast Missouri State College in Cape Girardeau.

Danny is vice-president of Explorer Post 43 and secretary of his Order of the Arrow chapter in Southeast Missouri.

Danny has contributed a major role in the construction of the manual work for many of the school functions in Sikeston high school.

He has been active in the drama productions in school--many of these took place "back of the stage."

Danny was awarded the Tom Chidester award for drama work last year. This is an annual honor given to an outstanding drama student each year by the Little Theatre group in Sikeston.

Danny hopes to attend Murray State University next year, and he plans to join the Air Force for a career after his college work.

Future Teachers Are To Conduct Various Classes

Nine Future Teachers of America members will be practice teaching in the Sikeston elementary, middle, and high schools on Wednesday and Thursday, May 3 and 4.

Girls will teach morning sessions with the aid of a supervising teacher.

Charlotte Jones will teach first grade at Airport; Belinda Ayers has charge of Mrs. Ted York's classes at Southwest; Mickie Gosnell will work with Mrs. Don Grant's second grade at Matthews.

Suzann Moore will assist Mrs. Robert Choate at Airport; Jeannette Meredith will teach first grade at Southwest with Mrs. Evelyn Barnett.

At the middle school Vicki Schindler will be in charge of Miss Georgia Houchins' English classes. Pat Gates will instruct physical education classes with Mrs. Vanita Kirk.

At the high school Mary Ann Bruce will teach Mrs. Lawrance Aeschlimann's French I classes, and Pam Tidwell will assist Mrs. Hemba Young in her home economic classes.

Purpose of these assignments is to give students who have teaching in mind as a career for the future actual classroom experience.

Officers of the FTA are Mary Ann Bruce, president; Pat Gates, vice-president; Liz Martin, secretary-treasuruer. Miss Lucile Mount is sponsor of the group.

Saving Time Starts Soon

Daylight saving time will start at 2 a.m. Sunday, April 30, in the state of Missouri.

Clocks will be set ahead one hour and remain in that way until the last Sunday in October, when they will be set back one hour to Central Standard Time.

Students should remember to set their clocks ahead Sunday so they will not be late for school Monday morning, May 1.

Sikeston Band To Entertain Rotary Club

Keith Collins Assists North Central Assoc. As Music Chairman

Late division Sikeston high school concert band, directed by Keith Collins, will play at the Rotary banquet for the District Convention in the high school gymnasium tonight at 7:30.

Annual district 609 conference of Rotary international is now in session with 500 Rotary members meeting in Sikeston.

Musical selections to be presented include "His Honor" march, "Au Pays Lorrain," "Tijuana Brass," "Richard Rodgers," "Parade," and "America the Beautiful."

Next Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday Mr. Collins will be a member of the evaluation team of the North Central Association. As chairman of the music committee he will review the music department of Chester, Illinois' high school.

Late division band recently received a I-Superior rating at the Southeast Missouri district contest at Cape. The band also received a I rating in sight reading.

Jesus clothes the Beatitudes with his own life. He summarizes virtue as being love. If ever love was clothed in human flesh -- both love for God and love for man -- it was in Bethlehem. Writes James Stalker, "He never spent an hour, he never did an action, without direct referernce to (his Father)." Jesus' love for man is the bright star in the night of human self-interest. It is the only absolute example of unrequited love. Different manifestations or aspects of his love --- such as patience and mercy -- can each be named a separate virtue, for love encompasses all his virtues.

Time To Begin New Road Toward Peace For Nation

WHAT HAS BECOME of the dove who carried an olive branch? Did this symbol ever exist or were there always eagles who appeared dangerous and stately and always forboding hammers and sickles. Peace, peace, where have you flown?

Through war our ancestors have dealt blow after blow for peace. They have attempted to force one another to live in harmony. Always one battle after another. The American Revolution, the Civil War, World War I, World War II, the Korean War, the war in Viet Nam, and all those wars before and all the wars which could follow.

Where have we been? Where are we going? Have wars ever accomplished anything? This question can certainly be debated. As one looks at history, he can certainly see wars caused by wars before him.

Can the vicious cycle ever be broken? Are we ever to find a world in which people can break away from greed and selfishness? Will there ever be a day when we can see our own shortcomings and accept those of others?

It is time that we recognize how petty humanity is and attempt to remedy the situation. It is our responsibility to halt the march toward destruction and change our attitudes and values. We should be citizens of the world, working for the common good of all.

We, the adults of tomorrow, can make the foundations of a road to real peace, and some day when the road is completed and leads directly to a promised land of peace, our posterity may glance upward and see a dove drifting above them with an olive branch in its beak. Then, perhaps, in the wind we will hear a murmured prayer of thanks, and know we started a job that on completion was well done.

Students Organize Time For More Efficient Work

HAS ANYONE EVER wondered at the close of a day where the hours of that day slipped? Although one lives and experiences every hour of each day, he may look back and wonder what he accomplished. The hours may have passed by without complete utilization.

All the plans made for that day may have passed unfulfilled, and one will never be able to bring back those wasted hours. They are gone and completely unattainable for any further use.

With graduation for seniors and the end of a school year for underclassmen close at hand, it is even more important for everyone to make the most of the time that is left to bring up the final grades for this school year.

Best way for anyone to do this is to learn to organize one's time for doing homework with consideration allowed for the extra-curricular activities of that day.

Organizing time is extremely difficult for many people. They wait to perform the difficult tasks until the last minute, usually meeting the required deadlines in haste and in a haphazard manner.

Last minute preparation is more difficult, worrisome and frequently inefficient.

Examinations in various classes are sometimes prepared at the last minute. Class reports barely meet the deadline as they are prepared hurriedly the night before -- with such a delay, one often panics, and the quality of any project is depreciated and ends with a low grade.

If during the week days, life becomes more hectic than planned and assignments pile up with more to do than time will allow, use the extra time on week ends and holidays to push the crisis away and make the days more sunny and bright.

At today's fast moving pace, a person has more tasks to do than there are hours in the day, and it is imperative that everyone organize his daily schedule and lead a richer life with more time for relaxation. ------Cheryl Hurley.

Seven Juniors Attend Girls State

SEVEN OUTSTANDING JUNIOR GIRLS chosen for the 26th annual Girls State are (standing) Sheila Topp and Lynne Tenkhoff, (seated) Randy Wolferding, Diane Taylor, Mary Jane Cope, and Linda Estes. Marjean Brown was not present when the picture was snapped.

Local Groups Will Sponsor Select Girls

Seven junior girls have been selected to represent Sikeston high school in the 26th annual session of Missouri Girls State on the campus of Stephens College June 18-24.

Girls chosen were Marjean Brown, Mary Jane Cope, Linda Estes, Diane Taylor, Lynne Tenkhoff, Sheila Topp, and Randy Wolferding.

Girls State is for the purpose of educating the country's youth in the duties, privileges, rights, and responsibilities of American citizenship.

Girls will attend classes, assemblies, and briefings concerning city, state, and county government.

Six hundred and twelve girls will attend this year's sessions. Two girls will be selected from the citizens of Girls State for outstanding all around citizenship to attend Girls Nation in Washington, D.C.

Other highlights of the week will be the divisional elections with the inauguration of the state officials on Thursday evening.

Girls State is sponsored by the American Legion Auxiliary and various civic groups in town. Mrs. Carl Elam is the local director for Girls State.

Bob Crawford Is Speaker During DE-COE Banquet

STEVE STEWART presents BOB CRAWFORD a pen and pencil set.

Bob Crawford, executive vice-prsident of the Missouri Retailers' Association of Jefferson City, spoke on subject, "Sikeston 2,000 A.D.," for the annual distributive education and cooperative occupational education classes joint banquet Thursday evening.

Bob Crawford served as Secretary of State of Missouri under the late Governor Blair, and he presently lives in Jefferson City.

Senior Steve Stewart was the master of ceremonies for the evening, and Ted Wagoner offered the invocation.

Introduction of the school board and business representatives was made by Bill Bye.

Banquet was held at the Holiday Inn and was in honor of the employers.

Each employer was presented a certificate of appreciation for his cooperation with the program.

In the program students attend school part of the day and work the second half of the day.

Distributive education students and the cooperative occupational education students presented Mr. Crawford with a pen and pencil set.

Norman Woods is the sponsor of both classes.

Sidwell, Wiss Will Compete For School's Top Leader

Students campaigning for the office of student body president in Sikeston high school for next school year are King Sidwell and Gary Wiss.

Juniors seeking the office of the vice-president are Eddie Felker, Mike Musick, and Ken Woodward.

Election for the student body leaders is scheduled for next Thursday in the cafetorium.

Polls will open at the beginning of the first lunch shift and close at the end of the third shift.

Danny Cannon Is Active In Varied SHS Activities

by Bill Marsh

Senior Danny Cannon has been an athletic manager in the Sikeston public schools for the past five years. He has been head manager for the track squad for the past three years, and he served the football team the last two years.

Danny recently received the highest scout honor, the Eagle Award, from General Lewis B. Hershey at the Southeast Missouri State College in Cape Girardeau.

Danny is vice-president of Explorer Post 43 and secretary of his Order of the Arrow chapter in Southeast Missouri.

Danny has contributed a major role in the construction of the manual work for many of the school functions in Sikeston high school.

He has been active in the drama productions in school-many of these took place "back of the stage."

Danny was awarded the Tom Chidester award for drama work last year. This is an annual honor given to an outstanding drama student each year by the Little Theatre group in Sikeston.

Danny hopes to attend Murray State University next year, and he plans to join the Air Force for a career after his college work.

Students Aid In Producing 'South Pacific'

Several students have joined with teachers and student teachers to work toward the success of the Sikeston Little Theatre production of "South Pacific" to be presented tonight in the middle school auditorium at 8 o'clock.

Doug Morrison, student teacher under Robert Walker, displays various dramatic, singing and dancing abilities in one of the male leads in the play.

Jerry Smithers, student teacher for Mrs. Catherine Matthews, joins students Bill Lashmet, John Hough, Danny Cannon, and John Tidwell in a song and dance chorus.

Greer Huff plays one of the female nurses on the "South Pacific" isle. Sheila Topp appears as assistant to the native woman, Bloody Mary.

Miss Jean Love, art instructor, Ernest Elledge and Harley Barnes, principals of the middle school, and W. W. Wilkison, coordinator of math and science in the Sikeston public schools, work behind the scenes to add to the success of the play.

Working on make up are students Pat McMullin and Darla Scoles.

Various people are working on properties for the play. A few of the students are Paul Elledge, Jim Doggett, Sheila Topp, Mark Foster, Pam Marsh, Nancy Hazel, Janie Rhodes, Danny Cannon, and John Hough.

Barker staffers wish the members of the cast and crew of "South Pacific" great success on the opening night!

Future Teachers Are To Conduct Various Classes

Nine Future Teachers of America members will be practice teaching in the Sikeston elementary, middle, and high schools on Wednesday and Thursday, May 3 and 4.

Girls will teach morning sessions with the aid of a supervising teacher.

Charlotte Jones will teach first grade at Airport; Belinda Ayers has charge of Mrs. Ted York's classes at Southwest; Mickie Gosnell will work with Mrs. Don Grant's second grade at Matthews.

Suzann Moore will assist Mrs. Robert Choate at Airport; Jeannette Meredith will teach first grade at Southwest with Mrs. Evelyn Barnett.

At the middle school Vicki Schindler will be in charge of Miss Georgia Houchins' English classes. Pat Gates will instruct physical education classes with Mrs. Vanita Kirk.

At the high school Mary Ann Bruce will teach Mrs. Lawrance Aeschlimann's French I classes, and Pam Tidwell will assist Mrs. Hemba Young in her home economic classes.

Purpose of these assignments is to give students who have teaching in mind as a career for the future actual classroom experience.

Officers of the FTA are Mary Ann Bruce, president; Pat Gates, vice-president; Liz Martin, secretary-treasuruer. Miss Lucile Mount is sponsor of the group.

Saving Time Starts Soon

Daylight saving time will start at 2 a.m. Sunday, April 30, in the state of Missouri.

Clocks will be set ahead one hour and remain in that way until the last Sunday in October, when they will be set back one hour to Central Standard Time.

Students should remember to set their clocks ahead Sunday so they will not be late for school Monday morning, May 1.

Sikeston Band To Entertain Rotary Club

Keith Collins Assists North Central Assoc. As Music Chairman

Late division Sikeston high school concert band, directed by Keith Collins, will play at the Rotary banquet for the District Convention in the high school gymnasium tonight at 7:30.

Annual district 609 conference of Rotary international is now in session with 500 Rotary members meeting in Sikeston.

Musical selections to be presented include "His Honor" march, "Au Pays Lorrain," "Tijuana Brass," "Richard Rodgers," "Parade," and "America the Beautiful."

Next Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday Mr. Collins will be a member of the evaluation team of the North Central Association. As chairman of the music committee he will review the music department of Chester, Illinois' high school.

Late division band recently received a I-Superior rating at the Southeast Missouri district contest at Cape. The band also received a I rating in sight reading.

Jesus clothes the Beatitudes with his own life. He summarizes virtue as being love. If ever love was clothed in human flesh -- both love for God and love for man -- it was in Bethlehem. Writes James Stalker, "He never spent an hour, he never did an action, without direct referernce to (his Father)." Jesus' love for man is the bright star in the night of human self-interest. It is the only absolute example of unrequited love. Different manifestations or aspects of his love --- such as patience and mercy -- can each be named a separate virtue, for love encompasses all his virtues.

SHS To Host Open House Mon., May 15

Sikeston high school will host its annual open house Monday evening, May 15.

Students and teachers have been preparing various notebooks and projects to be on display for the parents and friends at 6:30 that evening.

Early division band, directed by Keith Collins, will present its annual spring pop concert on the outdoor stage immediately after the closing of the open house.

Selections the band will play are "Prelude and Fugue"; "The Grasshopper's Dance"; Brigadoon."

"South Pacific"; "Bells of San Miguel"; "Fields in Summer"; "Shadow of Your Smile."

"On a Clear Day"; "How the West Was Won"; and "Folk Suite."

An ancient civilization once thrived some 6,000 years ago in an area that is now a desert between India and Pakistan, says The World Almanac. Usually known as the Indus Valley Civilization, the excavated cities of Mohenjo-Daro and Harappa show that these urban centers supported a population numbering in the thousands. The cities also show evidence of a complex form of government, elaborate irrigation and drainage systems, well-laid-out streets and houses of several stories.

COOL CUSTOMER

A man opened the door of his refrigerator one day and saw a rabbit reclining on the top shelf. Surprised, he nevertheless asked, "And just what do you think you're doing in my refrigerator, Rabbit?"

The rabbit said, "What does it say on the door, fwiend?"

The man looked and answered. "Why, nothing but 'Westinghouse.'"

"Well," replied the rabbit, settling himself more comfortably. "I'se westing."

An ancient civilization once thrived some 6,000 years ago in an area that is now a desert between India and Pakistan, says The World Almanac. Usually known as the Indus Valley Civilization, the excavated cities of Mohenjo-Daro and Harappa show that these urban centers supported a population numbering in the thousands. The cities also show evidence of a complex form of government, elaborate irrigation and drainage systems, well-laid-out streets and houses of several stories.

COOL CUSTOMER

A man opened the door of his refrigerator one day and saw a rabbit reclining on the top shelf. Surprised, he nevertheless asked, "And just what do you think you're doing in my refrigerator, Rabbit?"

The rabbit said, "What does it say on the door, fwiend?"

The man looked and answered, "Why, nothing but 'Westinghouse.'"

"Well," replied the rabbit, settling himself more comfortably. "I'se westing."

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Questions

Dear Ann Landers: Recently you made the statement that people who treat animals as if they were humans ought to have their heads examined. I have lived among both animals and people for a good long time and I am in favor of treating animals BETTER than people simply because they deserve it.

When I was a young woman, I had the ridiculous notion that any husband was better than none, so, like a fool, I married the first man who asked me. To my everlasting credit. I recognized my mistake early and got rid of the lying, cheating tyrant. I am presently enjoying the companionship of a cat.

Now I am a queen in my home instead of an unpaid servant. I get affection when I want it and if I wish to be left alone, I need make no apologies. My cat is far more considerate and loyal than that heel who swore before God and man to cherish me 'til death do us part.

Did you hear of the old maid who said she didn't need a husband because she had a parrot who swore, a fish who drank and a cat who stayed out all night? Well, I'm with her - CONTENT

Dear Con: Any woman who holds such a rock-bottom opinion of men should do some nice fellow a favor and stay single the rest of her life.

Dear Ann Landers: I am the tramp that "Mrs. Betrayed" wrote to complain about. Every word she said is true. Her description of me was perfect. And, I might add, her description of herself was perfect, too.

She is indeed attractive, well-groomed, well-educated, a fine hostess and she comes from a very distinguished family. I have no education to speak of and I am not beautiful. I don't know beans about entertaining company, and my family is from nowhere.

So, the question I'd like to ask "Mrs. Betrayed" is this: Why would a man who is married to such a wonderful woman spend time with a tramp like me? - DUMB BELLA

Dear Bella: Because she's there.

Dear Ann Landers: I am sick at heart as I write this letter. I read this morning where three small children suffocated to death in unused refrigerators. The fear and anxiety suffered by those little ones before they died is too horrible to contemplate. And it was so needless!

Several years ago I remember reading a letter in your column about this sort of carelessness on the part of mothers. You suggested the doors of the old ice boxes and refrigerators be removed. I'd like to improve on your advice if you will permit it.

Please tell mothers to ask the movers to place the old refrigerators with the doors toward the wall. This requires no time or energy, and the children are protected against possible tragedy.

Thank you, in advance for publishing my letter - CONCERNED GRANDMOTHER

Dear Gran: I still recommend removing the doors. But I am going to address an additional plea to furniture movers the world over - wherever you may be.

Please tack this column up in the garage, the wash room, the warehouse, wherever you think it will get the greatest exposure. The simple act of placing the old refrigerator with the doors toward the wall could save hundreds of lives.

Want to say "no" to drinking without your buddies putting you down? Get cued in. Write for "Booze and You - For Teen-Agers Only," by Ann Landers. Send 35¢ in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE
By Jack Strass L.L.D.

THE CASE OF THE PASSIONATE POLICEMAN

Patrolman Charley knew he was in love because he thought almost as much of his girlfriend as he thought of himself. A big, strong and handsome policeman, he was no longer interested in all girls but just one. And, when he was in her arms, he was figuratively carried away. One night, however, he was literally carried away. Wrapped in her arms, his gun fell out of his holster inopportunely and shot him in the leg.

Refusing to accep the interruption philosophically, Charley filed for a Workman's Compensation and was turned down.

"You weren't shot chasing a criminal," he was told. "You were shot while making love."

"That's got nothing to do with it," protested Charley. "A policeman, technically, is always on duty. Whether he's injured in a clinch or during a pinch, he's on duty. Therefore, I'm entitled to the award."

Charley took his claim to court.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you grant the passionate policeman a compensation award?

This is how the judge ruled: No! The judge held that to be entitled to a Workman's Compensation award, an injury must incurr during an activity connected with the employee's job or duty. In this case, concluded the judge, Charley's injury was incurred during a romantic interval which was not connected with his employment or duty.

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Questions

Dear Ann Landers: Recently you made the statement that people who treat animals as if they were humans ought to have their heads examined. I have lived among both animals and people for a good long time and I am in favor of treating animals BETTER than people simply because they deserve it.

When I was a young woman, I had the ridiculous notion that any husband was better than none, so, like a fool, I married the first man who asked me. To my everlasting credit. I recognized my mistake early and got rid of the lying, cheating tyrant. I am presently enjoying the companionship of a cat.

Now I am a queen in my home instead of an unpaid servant. I get affection when I want it and if I wish to be left alone, I need make no apologies. My cat is far more considerate and loyal than that heel who swore before God and man to cherish me 'til death do us part.

Did you hear of the old maid who said she didn't need a husband because she had a parrot who swore, a fish who drank and a cat who stayed out all night? Well, I'm with her - CONTENT

Dear Con: Any woman who holds such a rock-bottom opinion of men should do some nice fellow a favor and stay single the rest of her life.

Dear Ann Landers: I am the tramp that "Mrs. Betrayed" wrote to complain about. Every word she said is true. Her description of me was perfect. And, I might add, her description of herself was perfect, too.

She is indeed attractive, well-groomed, well-educated, a fine hostess and she comes from a very distinguished family. I have no education to speak of and I am not beautiful. I don't know beans about entertaining company, and my family is from nowhere.

So, the question I'd like to ask "Mrs. Betrayed" is this: Why would a man who is married to such a wonderful woman spend time with a tramp like me? - DUMB BELLA

Dear Bella: Because she's there.

Dear Ann Landers: I am sick at heart as I write this letter. I read this morning where three small children suffocated to death in unused refrigerators. The fear and anxiety suffered by those little ones before they died is too horrible to contemplate. And it was so needless!

Several years ago I remember reading a letter in your column about this sort of carelessness on the part of mothers. You suggested the doors of the old ice boxes and refrigerators be removed. I'd like to improve on your advice if you will permit it.

Please tell mothers to ask the movers to place the old refrigerators with the doors toward the wall. This requires no time or energy, and the children are protected against possible tragedy.

Thank you, in advance for publishing my letter - CONCERNED GRANDMOTHER

Dear Gran: I still recommend removing the doors. But I am going to address an additional plea to furniture movers the world over - wherever you may be.

Please tack this column up in the garage, the wash room, the warehouse, wherever you think it will get the greatest exposure. The simple act of placing the old refrigerator with the doors toward the wall could save hundreds of lives.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE
By Jack Strass L.L.D.

THE CASE OF THE PASSIONATE POLICEMAN

Patrolman Charley knew he was in love because he thought almost as much of his girlfriend as he thought of himself. A big, strong and handsome policeman, he was no longer interested in all girls but just one. And, when he was in her arms, he was figuratively carried away. One night, however, he was literally carried away. Wrapped in her arms, his gun fell out of his holster inopportunely and shot him in the leg.

Refusing to accep the interruption philosophically, Charley filed for a Workman's Compensation and was turned down.

"You weren't shot chasing a criminal," he was told. "You were snot while making love."

"That's got nothing to do with it," protested Charley. "A policeman, technically, is always on duty. Whether he's injured in a clinch or during a pinch, he's on duty. Therefore, I'm entitled to the award."

Charley took his claim to court.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you grant the passionate policeman a compensation award?

This is how the judge ruled: No! The judge held that to be entitled to a Workman's Compensation award, an injury must incurr during an activity connected with the employee's job or duty. In this case, concluded the judge, Charley's injury was incurred during a romantic interval which was not connected with his employment or duty.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1898, the United States officially entered into a state of war with Spain.

On this date:

In 1836, Gen. Sam Houston and his army of Texans won an historic victory in the battle of San Jacinto.

In 1910, American author and humorist Samuel Clements, better known as Mark Twain, died.

In 1944, American bombers raided Bucharest, the Nazi-held capital of Romania.

In 1945, Tokyo ordered a shakeup of key local officials throughout Japan and Korea to help meet the threat of a possible American invasion.

In 1946, 26 Republican and Democratic governors urged Congress to balance the budget.

Ten years ago—Secretary of State John Foster Dulles told a special Japanese envoy the United States could not unilaterally abandon nuclear weapons tests.

Five years ago — President John F. Kennedy pressed a golden telegraph key in Palm Beach, Fla. to open the "Century 21" exposition in Seattle, Wash.

One year ago—Surgeons implanted an artificial heart in a human being for the first time at a Houston hospital.

"The most considerate husband I know," says Kiwanian Doug White in North Hollywood, "is the gent who remembers to oil the lawn mower for his wife every Saturday morning before he goes out to play golf."

War II, will not come about in Vietnam, the general said.

The strategy of the conflict, as Taylor defined it, has four main aspects: The ground war, the air war, the non-military activities to stabilize the government, and diplomacy.

Within the ground war there are really three wars, Taylor explained. The "big war" where sizable units fight in battalion, regiment and even division levels. This aspect is growing, but the general said this is not necessarily a bad sign. He contended that the North Vietnam will continue to suffer heavy losses.

There is also the "little war" of guerrilla attacks and raids, which is scattered throughout the 43 provinces of South Vietnam. The other aspect is the "criminal war" as it was called by former Ambassador to Vietnam Henry Cabot Lodge, Taylor said. This includes the terrorist activities aimed at civilians in the South Vietnam government.

The "air war" has increased in the past year and probably has caused more controversial debate than other aspects, Taylor said.

Bombing of targets north of the 17th parallel has increased.

Some of the reasons for the use of air power, he said, are: To allow the South Vietnamese to have a feeling that they are really striking back with force, Taylor continued.

The bombing slows the infiltration from the north, and will remind Ho Chi Minh that he is not living in a sanctuary. Little by little we'll move in and destroy it, if he doesn't change his ways, Taylor said.

The non-military activities conducted by American civilians working with different agencies in Vietnam to rehabilitate the people and form stability in the provinces is difficult to assess, Taylor said.

The war itself is difficult to assess, because what is true in some provinces doesn't apply in others, he noted.

The general said he was encouraged with the relative stability of the Ky government since his departure as ambassador in July, 1965. The government changed hands five times during his year as ambassador, following the fall of the Diem regime.

The Ky government is moving toward establishment of constitutional government with elections coming in September and considering the political background, Taylor said progress is promising.

He pointed out that the situation is complex, and one of the chief obstacles to stability is the inexperienced officials. Leadership was not fostered among the South Vietnamese during French rule, and a serious gap comparable to the Korean situation exists. Japan held down local leadership in Korea during its occupation, he stated.

On the diplomatic front thus far "we have had no success," Taylor stated.

"We are progressing on many fronts, but no honest official can make predictions as to when we will approach a termination," he said.

The ground war is going extremely well, because of the effect of American forces, Taylor said.

The casualty rates for the North Vietnamese last year were more than 100,000 and will exceed that number this year. Desertions among the enemy totaled about 20,000 last year, and this number will be exceeded this year, he continued.

The "little war" of guerrilla raids is still a serious problem and as long as it continues so will the "criminal war," Taylor said.

The effectiveness of the air war was shown during the lunar five-day truce in February. When the bombing was stopped, it was estimated that the North Vietnamese moved more materials to the south in five days than they did in the previous three months, he said.

Taylor cautioned that when, at last, "we do approach a settlement we should not let our eagerness allow us to move too fast on the military side or compromise our objectives."

The stakes in the war are world-wide, Taylor emphasized.

The stakes as defined by the late President John F. Kennedy are for the extension of freedom. It is a battle for the conquest for minds and souls, as well as for men and territory, Taylor quoted him as saying.

"This is a struggle in which we have taken sides," he concluded.

again identify St. Louis with the Mississippi River."

The area involved in the 20- to 30-year plan extends from the River Des Peres to the south to the city limits on the north. The area would be traversed by a scenic parkway drive.

One of the proposed improvements is a "megastructure," called "a city within a city," at Broadway and Chippewa. The 52-acre site would provide living and recreational facilities for 12,000.

The plan also calls for shopping centers, new residential developments, recreational facilities, and industrial and commercial complexes.

About one-third of the land involved is owned by the railroads and the city. One fifth of the area is vacant land.

"Most of this area is not available to the citizens of St. Louis because of its inaccessibility and uninviting development," the planners said.

The plan will be studied by civic, financial and development groups to determine how it can be implemented. The Commission will hold a public hearing on the proposal in September.

Dog Pack Kills 45 Zoo Animals

BALTIMORE, Md. (AP) - A pack of stray dogs roamed a five-acre section of the Children's Zoo in Baltimore early today, killing 45 animals.

The animals included 34 rabbits, three lambs, two guinea pigs, two small nubian goats, one hybrid deer, two wild tail deer, and one buck.

Arthur Watson, director of the Baltimore Zoo, said the dogs ate only one of the animals, a rabbit. The Children's Zoo, featuring tame animals that can be fed or petted by children, is part of the Baltimore Zoo, situated in Druid Hill Park in a residential area.

Hearnes called the Spainhower amendment a "death blow" to the bill. It would mean, he said, that only one toll road could be built in the next 20 to 30 years and that would not meet the need.

Through Tuesday night and early Wednesday his lieutenants worked to muster opposition to the Spainhower limitation. They were successful because Wednesday during a long and bitter House session the amendment was reconsidered and defeated.

Wednesday morning Hearnes took part in the inaugural ceremonies in Columbia for John C. Weaver, new president of the University of Missouri.

He admitted to a bad case of fidgets while he was in Columbia and the bill was being debated in Jefferson City, 30 miles away.

On his return later Wednesday he stayed close to the House chamber, in a legislator's office, to receive minute by minute reports on the arguments.

Finally, however, he had to leave to take a plane to New York where he had speaking engagements Thursday.

So the Democratic majority of the house, led by men Hearnes had approved, put the toll road proposal in deep freeze until next Tuesday.

Since his return from New York, Hearnes said, he has received some verbal explanations of what shape the bill is in but he wasn't sure just how seriously some of the changes might affect the basic bill.

Nor, he said, did he know what was contemplated in some half a dozen amendments that were being waved on the House floor when the argument was delayed Wednesday evening.

He grinned today when he said he certainly was going to be close by while the bill is being debated further next Tuesday.

War II, will not come about in Vietnam, the general said.

The strategy of the conflict, as Taylor defined it, has four main aspects: The ground war, the air war, the non-military activities to stabilize the government, and diplomacy.

Within the ground war there are really three wars, Taylor explained. The "big war" where sizable units fight in battalion, regiment and even division levels. This aspect is growing, but the general said this is not necessarily a bad sign. He contended that the North Vietnam will continue to suffer heavy losses.

There is also the "little war" of guerrilla attacks and raids, which is scattered throughout the 43 provinces of South Vietnam. The other aspect is the "criminal war" as it was called by former Ambassador to Vietnam Henry Cabot Lodge, Taylor said. This includes the terrorist activities aimed at civilians in the South Vietnam government.

The "air war" has increased in the past year and probably has caused more controversial debate than other aspects, Taylor said.

Bombing of targets north of the 17th parallel has increased.

Some of the reasons for the use of air power, he said, are: To allow the South Vietnamese to have a feeling that they are really striking back with force, Taylor continued.

The bombing slows the infiltration from the north, and will remind Ho Chi Minh that he is not living in a sanctuary. Little by little we'll move in and destroy it, if he doesn't change his ways, Taylor said.

The non-military activities conducted by American civilians working with different agencies in Vietnam to rehabilitate the people and form stability in the provinces is difficult to assess, Taylor said.

The war itself is difficult to assess, because what is true in some provinces doesn't apply in others, he noted.

The general said he was encouraged with the relative stability of the Ky government since his departure as ambassador in July, 1965. The government changed hands five times during his year as ambassador, following the fall of the Diem regime.

The casualty rates for the North Vietnamese last year were more than 100,000 and will exceed that number this year. Desertions among the enemy totaled about 20,000 last year, and this number will be exceeded this year, he continued.

The "little war" of guerrilla raids is still a serious problem and as long as it continues so will the "criminal war," Taylor said.
